

Herald Tribune

Published with The New York Times and The Washington Post

PARIS, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1973

Established 1887

TODAY'S WEATHER FORECAST - PARIS: Visible snow showers. Temp. 5-8 (41-46). Tomorrow similar. Yesterday's temp. 5-8 (41-46). NIGHT: Bright periods. Temp. 5-8 (41-46). Tomorrow possible snow showers. Yesterday's temp. 5-8 (41-46). CHANCELLER: Rough. ROYALTY: 10-11 (41-46). NEW YORK: Cloudy. Temp. 5-8 (41-46). Yesterday's temp. 5-8 (41-46). ADDITIONAL WEATHER - PAGE 4

28,030

Dayan Asserts Israelis Erred In Downing Jet

By Terence Smith

JERUSALEM, Feb. 25 (NYT)—Defense Minister Moshe Dayan yesterday said that Israel made an "error of judgment" Wednesday in the downing of a Libyan airliner over the Sinai Desert. [Citing "humanitarian considerations," Israel offered today to compensation to the families of those killed on the airliner. United Press International reported, Israel defended the act as legal and denied any guilt. A cabinet communiqué after a three-hour meeting reiterated that the downing "occurred under circumstances of innocent threats of terrorism from the air."

Libyan Calls for a Planned Mass Murder

First Official Tripoli Reaction to Incident

TRIPOLI, Libya, Feb. 25 (AP)—Libya's minister of information yesterday branded the downing of a Libyan airliner by Israel as "premeditated mass murder."

[In Beirut, a pro-Egyptian Lebanese newspaper said yesterday that Libyan Air Force fighter planes were patrolling the Mediterranean with orders to shoot down any Israeli aircraft they met. United Press International reported.

[In Tel Aviv, Israel's El Al Airlines reported business as usual today with virtually no cancellations or transfers to other carriers despite the reports that Libyan Air Force planes were hunting its jetliners.

[The Beirut newspaper, Al Yom, said that the patrols had been ordered by Libya's Revolutionary Command Council. The newspaper said that Libyan Mirage jets intercepted an American Trans World Airlines jetliner Sunday and "asked the TWA pilot a few questions about the identity of the plane and the company it belonged to."

[However, a TWA spokesman in Beirut said that he knew nothing about any such incident.

In the first official Libyan statement since the crash of the plane on Wednesday, Information Minister Abu Zaid Omar Jarda said yesterday that the Boeing-727 had extended its landing carriage and was about to put down when the Israeli planes opened fire.

Pilot's Record Noted

The French pilot, he said, had more than 12,000 flying hours and "would not have endangered his passengers and crew would have made no dangerous maneuvers. The plane was shot at without any opportunity for it to land."

"This manslaughter was prepared in advance and decided in advance," Mr. Jarda charged at a press conference. "This crime was committed not only against Libya but against humanity in general. The plane carried passengers of several nationalities other than ours."

The Israeli pilots "tried to cover up this horrible crime," Mr. Jarda said. "But they did it in such a way that it was evident that this murder was planned and they did not know how to justify it."

The minister said that Israeli authorities had reported that the American-made Phantom fighter-jets flew only three meters away from the Libyan airliner. "The pilots could easily have noticed the passengers—children," (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

flowers May Show Emotion, Russian Scientist Theorizes

MOSCOW, Feb. 25 (UPI)—Soviet scientists believe flowers "feel" fear, joy and pain, the newspaper Socialist Industry reported today.

"Scientists at different times have voiced assumptions about the sensitivity of plants," psychologist V. M. Pushkin told the newspaper.

"In our experiments, we used hypnosis to switch emotions on and off and received definitely positive answers as to the ability of plants to get emotionally involved."

During the tests, Dr. Pushkin said, a hypnotist put a person to sleep and told the subject either pleasant or unpleasant things "which aroused emotions of joy or sorrow."

An encephalograph attached to the subject's hand and to a leaf of a plant some distance away recorded similar emotions in the plant and the subject.

When the subject smiled, Dr. Pushkin said, the plant flourished its petals. When the subject was told it was cold and began shivering, the plant began to shrivel as it also chilled.

"If the living plant cell responds to processes going on in the human nervous system, some similarity must exist between processes that take place in plant cells and in nerve cells," Dr. Pushkin reasoned.

"The language of the plant cell is related to the language of the nerve cell," he said.

Dr. Pushkin said that, despite the research evidence, "it is too early to call this a discovery. It is safer to use the word hypothesis."

"It can be supposed that human mentality, human perception, man's thinking and memory all basically are a specialization of the information service which takes place at plant-cell level," he said.

Such a conclusion, he said, "makes it possible to approach the analysis of the origin of the nervous system. The responses of plant cells should help in understanding the functioning of human brain cells."

As the Vietnam Conferencees Arrive

"SIGN OF RECONCILIATION"—Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, the Foreign Minister of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of Vietnam (Viet Cong), being warmly greeted by South Vietnamese Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam at Paris reception Saturday.

William Rogers, U.S. Secretary of State.

Chi Peng-fei, Chinese Foreign Minister.

Mitchell Sharp, Canadian Minister of External Affairs.

Adam Malik, Indonesian Foreign Minister.

Stefan Olszowski, Polish Foreign Minister.

Kurt Waldheim, UN Secretary-General.

Andrei Gromyko, Soviet Foreign Minister.

Nguyen Duy Trinh, North Vietnamese Foreign Minister.

12 Powers Open Vietnam Talks Today In Paris

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, Feb. 25 (AP)—The U.S., Chinese and Soviet foreign ministers arrived here this weekend for the opening of the international conference on Vietnam tomorrow. Each praised the Jan. 27 peace agreement as a long step toward improving the international climate.

They and representatives from nine other governments and the United Nations will begin work tomorrow on the international guarantees for the Vietnam cease-fire, and for reconciliation and reconstruction in that battered country.

U.S. Secretary of State William F. Rogers said on his arrival last night that the conference presented "an opportunity, unparalleled certainly in recent history, for constructive and concerted international action."

Today, Mr. Rogers began a round of private contacts by meeting with Chinese Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei, Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Saigon Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam. He also conferred by telephone with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and arranged for a private meeting with him during the week.

Participating in the conference are the United States, China, the Soviet Union, France and Britain, the three Vietnamese governments, the four members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), and Kurt Waldheim, Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Canada's Threat to Quit

Mr. Rogers met with Mr. Sharp after Canada threatened yesterday to quit as a member of the ICCS unless this conference sets up some international authority with responsibility for keeping the peace.

Mr. Sharp said that without some kind of "continuing political authority" to which the ICCS could report, Canada would withdraw from the body after 60 days.

Without that authority, Mr. Sharp said, "I do not believe that I could say to the people of Canada that the job we are asked to do, the burden which Canada is being asked to bear, is worth it."

The Jan. 27 peace agreement stipulates that the international conference is to make "definitive arrangements" for the ICCS. Presumably this would include how the commission's reports are to be made, to whom and what action can be taken on reported violations of the peace agreement.

Mr. Gromyko arrived yesterday and immediately pledged Soviet support for both North Vietnam and the Viet Cong during this conference. He said that the Soviet Union felt "profound satisfaction" with the peace agreement, and that it opened up "more favorable prospects for the solution of other problems of Indochina and for the improvement of the international situation as a whole."

Chi to 'Cooperate'

Chinese Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei, arriving this morning, said China was "ready to consult and cooperate with all parties concerned and make positive efforts for the success of the conference."

Mr. Chi expressed the hope that the conference would "contribute to the thorough implementation of the peace agreement and thereby bring peace in Indochina and a relaxation of tension in the Far East."

Most of the officials arriving yesterday and today were obliged to use the Emergency military airfield because of the air controllers' strike at civil airports.

Mr. Waldheim and the UN (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

U.S. to Bomb If Laos Truce Is Violated

Warns Hanoi to Halt Offensive Fighting

By Lewis M. Simons

VIENTIANE, Laos, Feb. 25 (WP)—The United States has put North Vietnam on notice that any major Communist cease-fire violations in Laos will be met by renewed American bombing.

According to an authoritative source, the North Vietnamese have "gotten the message." Military activity throughout the country today was described as relatively light. It was understood that any requests by Premier Souvanna Phouma for U.S. bombing would be considered on a case-by-case basis.

The power to decide whether to call in B-52s and other tactical aircraft from bases across the Mekong River in Thailand lies with Ambassador G. Mohr. Mr. Mohr, sometimes called the "field marshal" by his detractors, Mr. Godley decided in favor of renewing the air raids when Prince Souvanna made his first request Thursday night, hours after the cease-fire went into effect at noon.

Friday morning, Prince Souvanna told newsmen that he would call for American bombing if the North Vietnamese did not end what he termed their "general offensive."

But, even as the premier spoke with correspondents at his home, the B-52s were warming up in Thailand. Half an hour after Prince Souvanna ended his news conference, the planes were dumping their 500-pound bombs on the Bolovens Plateau town of Pak Song, in southernmost Laos.

The raid, according to informed reports, was brief but intense. It apparently had the desired effect of staying off further major attacks by North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces throughout the country. The bombing reportedly has not been repeated.

However, the North Vietnamese are still in control of Pak Song. Prince Souvanna has vowed that government forces will recapture the town, which already was battered into rubble before the Friday bombing.

If Prince Souvanna holds true to his word, the question is likely to arise over whether U.S. bombers would take part in the operation.

According to an authoritative source, American planes would only bomb to support government forces against Communist offensive attacks.

Because the North Vietnamese staged their artillery barrage and ground attack on Pak Song immediately after the cease-fire became official, 15 minutes after (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

Devaluation Seen as Ineffective

AFL-CIO Calls for New Trade, Money Policy

By Philip Shabecoff

BAL HARBOUR, Fla., Feb. 25 (NYT)—The Executive Council of the AFL-CIO called yesterday for a comprehensive new international trade and finance policy to halt the deterioration of America's position in the world economy, asserting that the recent dollar devaluation "cannot possibly solve the problem."

In a statement yesterday, the ruling body of the AFL-CIO said that the dollar devaluation announced earlier this month and the one made 14 months ago were "actions taken in haste" and did not constitute a policy. What is needed, the statement asserted, are the measures spelled out in the pending Burke-Hartke bill. These provisions would remove taxes and other incentives for companies to operate in foreign countries, would regulate and restrain the export of U.S. technology and capital and would limit imports that disrupt production and jobs in the United States. The bill is sponsored by Sen. Vance Hartke, D., Ind., and Rep. James A. Burke, D., Miss.

The AFL-CIO also called for "a prompt, full-dress congressional investigation of American corporations and banks which sell their country short in order to enhance their profits."

The statement insisted that the "major trouble by far" with America's position in the world economy is the huge, expanding investments in foreign countries by U.S. corporations and banks. It said that these organizations keep their dollars abroad to expand their holdings and to avoid paying U.S. taxes on their foreign profits.

While praising the provisions of the Burke-Hartke bill, the Executive Council statement did not demand passage of the bill as the solution to the country's international economic problems. Earlier last week, President Nixon spoke to the council and, while expressing sympathy with the problem of jobs lost because of imports, said he did not want to be limited by rigid trade requirements. He said he wanted legislation authorizing him to be flexible in trade negotiations with foreign countries.

The AFL-CIO had been insisting that the Burke-Hartke bill was the answer to the nation's international economic difficulties. But, after the President's visit, George Meany, the president of the AFL-CIO, said he found Mr. Nixon's approach "attractive."

In its statement and in a report by the AFL-CIO Economics Policy Committee to the Executive Council, on "World Trade in the 1970s," the federation concentrated much of its attack on multinational corporations, international banks and "big speculators," such as Arab oil sheikdoms.

In another statement, the labor federation welcomed the end of the war in Vietnam, saying that "The United States has emerged from this conflict with unimpaired credibility as a world power which honors its treaty obligations and meets its global responsibilities in protecting peace and freedom."

U.S. Says Trade Deficit Eased In January, Issues Data Early

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—In a rare weekend disclosure of economic figures, the Commerce Department reported yesterday that the nation's trade deficit narrowed in January to $383.8 million—compared to $318.8 million in January of 1972.

The figures released yesterday showed that the December deficit, originally reported at $563.3 million, had been revised downward to $441.1 million. This made the deficit for all of 1972 $6.3 billion, worst in U.S. history.

The department said it released the trade figures to provide "as much information as possible to interested parties," but it was obvious the disclosure was designed to calm troubled money markets overseas.

Release of the trade figures had been scheduled for Tuesday. The Office of Management and Budget sets up the schedule a month in advance, or more, in an effort to make sure that economic statistics are not released for political purposes.

In recent days, despite a devaluation of the dollar, overseas money markets have remained nervous because the free-market price of gold soared to record levels, displaying a lack of faith in paper money.

The January narrowing in the trade deficit occurred because the value of exports sent out of the country was estimated at $4,977 billion and the value of imports at $4,593 billion.

Even though the figures improved, the administration has been saying in the last several days that it expects the trade deficit to worsen before it gets better. And it says the improvement probably will not occur until the second half of 1973.

French Airport Controllers Extend Strike to Wednesday

PARIS, Feb. 25 (Reuters)—French air traffic controllers today decided to extend until Wednesday their six-day-old strike, which has virtually paralyzed air traffic in this country.

Meanwhile the French airline pilots' union announced today that it will begin a 48-hour strike, independent of the air controllers, on Wednesday to protest working conditions and the pilots' professional status.

The main controllers' union voted today to continue the strike following the government's decision earlier this week to bring in military personnel to take control of air traffic.

This decision, and the controllers' vote to extend the strike, made it virtually certain that there will be hardly any planes arriving in or leaving France for the next two days, as was the case today and yesterday.

The French pilots' union and the International Airline Pilots' Federation have said they will not fly into or out of France as long as the military is handling air traffic control.

The civilian controllers struck last Tuesday to back demands for more pay and the right to strike, which has been denied them since 1964. Their current strike, thus, is illegal. This factor has led the government to rule out any negotiations with the controllers until they return to work.

Air force personnel began setting up their equipment yesterday and will be ready to take over operations tomorrow.

About 1,200 passengers were taken by train and bus to Geneva and Brussels today to catch flights.

Head of IATA Hits Downing Of Airliner

Hammaraskjold Asks International Inquiry

MONTREAL, Feb. 25 (Reuters). —Knut Hammaraskjold, director general of the International Air Transport Association, has condemned the downing of a Libyan airliner by Israeli jets over the Sinai Desert four days ago as a "deplorable incident."

Mr. Hammaraskjold said Friday that not even the most stringent interpretation of provisions under the Chicago Convention on International Air Law permitted "such a degree of violence" for whatever reason, even in a zone of conflict.

Present efforts by most countries to eradicate all types of violence against civil aviation should be redoubled, he added.

The technical and operational circumstances associated with the Libyan jet incident will have to be objectively reviewed to insure that internationally recognized procedures on such occasions are adequate, Mr. Hammaraskjold said.

Objective Investigation

He proposed that an international inquiry commission be set up to make an objective investigation.

The proposal was made in a cable to Mordcheai Ben Ari, managing director of El Al, the Israeli national airline, and was made public today.

Mr. Hammaraskjold also proposed the establishment of an international committee made up of government representatives to work out new methods to prevent the recurrence of similar disasters in the future.

It was scheduled to receive a first-hand report on the incident from Israeli authorities on a visit to Israel.

Flies to Meet

In London, it was announced today that an international pilots' delegation may visit the Middle East to investigate the downing of the airliner.

A spokesman for the International Federation of Airline Pilots' Associations, which has called an emergency meeting tomorrow to discuss the incident, said:

"There is a strong possibility that delegates may call for a trip to the Middle East to have eye-to-eye talks with all the parties involved in Wednesday's tragedy."

In Tel Aviv today, the Israeli Airline Pilots' Association announced it is sending two airline captains to the meeting to put forward their country's point of view.

Informal Israeli sources said there was concern among pilots there over the lack of communication between countries which resulted in the Libyan airliner being shot down by Israeli fighters.

Britain's airline pilots are expected to demand a token boycott of flights into Israel.

A spokesman for the British Airline Pilots' Association said yesterday, "We are going to make strong recommendations at the meeting, but I can't say what they are."

ITALIA, which represents a total of 64,000 pilots around the world, said immediately after Wednesday's incident that it "strongly deplored the fact that lack of communication has brought about this further tragic breach in the neutrality of civil aviation."

In Paris, the French Federation of Civil Air Crews yesterday condemned the downing of the airliner as an "act of war carried out against a civilian airline's plane."

Several of the crew of the Libyan plane, including the dead pilot, were French.

The statement by the federation, which includes several air-crew unions, said Air France personnel sent to work for foreign airlines "are guarantors of the civil nature of their activities. No country can be ignorant of this."

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan during press conference in Tel Aviv Saturday.

Dayan Calls Incident an 'Error'

(Continued from Page 1) apparently that of the Libyan co-pilot, answered.

"I guess we have serious troubles with our heading compass," the pilot shouted through his radio to the Cairo control tower. "We are shot by your fighter. We are now shot by your fighter."

Identified as Israeli

A second later, the co-pilot apparently realized what was happening and is heard on the tape to shout: "It's an Israeli fighter."

"The same direction," the pilot said in the final remark on the cockpit recording.

A number of questions remained unanswered. Among them were these:

- How did the airliner manage to stray more than 100 miles off its course?
- Why were all the window curtains of the plane drawn, as reported by the Israeli pilots?
- Why did the captain of the airliner not respond to the pursuing fighters? According to the Israelis, he ignored all their radio transmissions.

Before yesterday, Mr. Dayan had placed the blame for the crash squarely with the captain of the airliner, who, they said, ignored repeated instructions to land his plane at an airfield in the Sinai.

But yesterday, Mr. Dayan conceded that the Israeli Air Force had misinterpreted the nature of the intrusion into the Sinai and the intentions of the airliner.

Without minimizing that factor, Mr. Dayan said, the performance of the French captain amounted to "serious irresponsibility."

Far Off Course

He noted that the captain had wandered far off his course and had failed to recognize the difference between the Israeli Phantoms, with their Star of David insignia, and Egyptian MiGs. "I think you have a right to expect more than that from a trained international pilot," he said.

Lt. Gen. David Elazar, the Israeli chief of staff, also attended the news conference. He said that under the circumstances, the Israeli military "could not discount the possibility that a civilian aircraft could come into our territory on a hostile mission."

Had Israel known that the plane was simply a civilian airliner with passengers aboard that had lost its way, he said, "there would have been no dilemma—we never would have used fire to force it down."

Israeli newspapers and several political leaders, meanwhile, reacted strongly against the mounting international criticism of Israel's role in the incident.

Waldheim a Target

Menachem Begin, the leader of the opposition Gahal party, for example, ridiculed the United Nations secretary-general, Kurt Waldheim, who has called for an international inquiry into the incident.

"What does Waldheim want?" Mr. Begin asked in a speech in Tel Aviv on Friday. "He never suggested an international inquiry after 11 Israelis were murdered at Munich, or after the massacre at the Lod Airport, in which citizens of foreign countries were also killed. But now, only now, does Waldheim speak."

The same tone has been struck by many of Israel's leading newspapers. To a large extent, the newspapers reflected the privately expressed views of many Israelis. Although most seemed to genuinely regret that the incident had occurred, few, if any, were prepared to accept any blame for the loss of innocent lives. Rather, they seemed to regard the downing of the airliner as justifiable under the circumstances.

Dayan Visits Survivors

TEL AVIV, Feb. 25 (Reuters). —Mr. Dayan visited survivors of the downing yesterday at a hospital in Beersheba.

He discussed the condition of the seven survivors, two of whom are reported to be gravely ill, with the hospital's chief surgeon, the Defense Ministry added.

Hospital sources said Mr. Dayan invited the wife of the airliner's co-pilot, Yuniis el-Mehdi, to tour Israel. The 27-year-old woman, Mrs. Taya Theodoropoulou, who uses her Greek maiden name, is said to have told Mr. Dayan she might do so when her husband has recovered.

Mr. Dayan spent about 20 minutes chatting with the survivors.

He also posed for a souvenir photograph with an Egyptian survivor, Faisal Mohammed al-Sharai, at the Egyptian request.

As he left, Mr. Dayan instructed his aides to make sure that the photograph reached Mr. Sharai, a cafeteria waiter. He broke a leg in the crash.

U.S. Bombs in Cambodia

HONOLULU, Feb. 25 (UPI). —The Pacific command today announced that U.S. airplanes conducted bombing raids in Cambodia but said there were no attacks in Laos.

The attacks against Communist positions were made "at the request of the Cambodian government," according to a statement issued on behalf of Adm. Noel Gayler, the Pacific commander in chief.

Libyan Air Space

Shut to Portugal And South Africa

BENGAZI, Libya, Feb. 25 (Reuters). All ships on their way to or from South Africa and Portugal have been banned from over-flying Libyan airspace, an airport spokesman confirmed here today.

The ban, effective since Feb. 14, also includes any air company owned by the two countries. The spokesman said that all air companies and civil aviation organizations have been notified of the decision.

He declined to state the reasons, saying that the order was issued by the Libyan government in Tripoli. He agreed.

Nixon Trade Aide

Goes to Brussels

BRUSSELS, Feb. 25 (Reuters). —Peter G. Peterson, President Nixon's special adviser on trade matters, arrived here today after three days of talks with British government ministers in London.

Mr. Peterson was a guest yesterday of Peter Walker, Britain's Minister of Trade and Industry, at Mr. Walker's country home west of London. They discussed relations between the European Economic Community and the United States, with special reference to forthcoming international trade negotiations, informed sources said.

Before going to London Mr. Peterson visited Rome, Bonn and Paris.

Reaffirms Goal of Peaceful Settlement

Egypt Denies U.S. Has Offered a 'Solution'

CAIRO, Feb. 25 (UPI). —Egypt will pursue its policy of seeking a peaceful settlement of the Middle East crisis and has not been offered an "American solution," Foreign Minister Mohammed Hassan el-Zayyat said today.

He told a meeting of Arab ambassadors to Egypt that "there is no working paper and no ideas that represent an American solution or a Soviet solution or anything else." Mr. Zayyat said after the one-hour meeting that Egypt based its search for a peaceful settlement on United Nations resolutions.

Off to Belgrade

"I emphasized the basic fact that the current situation is explosive and that Egypt will make maximum efforts in the political, military and economic fields to put an end to this situation," he said.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi

during a visit to India on March 7. He will also go to Pakistan and other Asian countries.

Hafez Ismail, national security adviser to President Anwar Sadat, has been in London and Washington as part of the same drive and Sayyid Marel, head of Egypt's only political party, has gone to Belgrade to start a tour of Eastern Europe.

Diplomatic sources said President Sadat had shown that the downing of a Libyan airliner over Israeli-occupied Sinai last week would not halt his peace moves when he allowed Mr. Ismail to continue his consultations in the United States.

Mr. Sadat met today with major members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Mr. Sadat met today with major members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Mr. Sadat met today with major

members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Mr. Sadat met today with major

members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Mr. Sadat met today with major

members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Mr. Sadat met today with major

members of parliament to discuss the airliner incident. Yesterday, he presided at a meeting of the "Supreme Committee for the Battle" with Israel.

Security Check

No announcement about the meeting was made yesterday, but

Reds Launch Major Drive In Cambodia

Two Vital Highways Come Under Attack

PHNOM PENH, Feb. 25 (UPI). —Cambodian Communists launched a nationwide offensive today, hitting government strongholds along two strategically important highways, the Cambodian high command said.

It was the largest offensive mounted by the Khmer Rouge, the command said.

Khmer Rouge units attacked government positions along Highway 3 from Phnom Penh to Cambodia's only deep-water port at Kompong Som, and Highway 2 from the capital toward the Mekong Delta. The Khmer Rouge pounded the positions with artillery throughout the day and staged ground assaults against posts as close as 12 miles south of Phnom Penh, the command said.

Daylong Fighting

The command also reported heavy daylong fighting along the banks of the Mekong, nine miles south of the naval base at Neak Luong, a key outpost guarding the river approach to the capital along which petroleum, food and military supplies are brought.

Government losses numbered one dead and seven wounded in that fighting, the command said.

Khmer Rouge gunners were also active less than two miles north of Neak Luong, where they blasted government outposts with 82-mm mortars, command spokesman Col. Am Rong said.

The Communists launched attacks on the district town of Peam Chor, near the South Vietnamese border, a garrison at Damnak Reachea, 60 miles south of here, a district near Kompong Cham, to the northeast, and on a hill 12 miles from Phnom Penh which dominates the capital's western approaches.

U.S. Bombs in Cambodia

HONOLULU, Feb. 25 (UPI). —The Pacific command today announced that U.S. airplanes conducted bombing raids in Cambodia but said there were no attacks in Laos.

The attacks against Communist positions were made "at the request of the Cambodian government," according to a statement issued on behalf of Adm. Noel Gayler, the Pacific commander in chief.

Although declaring that South Vietnam "is now on the verge of a very dangerous situation," Col. Tin said that North Vietnam is "determined to abide by the peace agreement and the protocols."

He indicated that one major problem still unresolved is a dispute between the Communist side and the Saigon government over the release of Vietnamese civilian prisoners.

"While we sympathize with the families of the American POWs, I want to remind you that here in Vietnam there are thousands of families waiting for their kin to return from detention," Col. Tin said. "We want to satisfy this sentiment and bring them back together."

The Saigon government, he said, still has not decided whether it will release civilian prisoners along with the military POWs to be released this week.

Maj. Gen. Daniel James, a top spokesman at the Pentagon, in Washington, refused to tie the delay on the list to the troubles at Hue and said:

"We are still expanding the list tomorrow," Gen. James said.

He said that he understood that North Vietnamese and Viet Cong representatives in Saigon told Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, the chief U.S. representative on the Joint Military Commission, that they were having trouble communicating with their people in the field.

Other sources, however, express

curry advice to President Anwar

Sadat of Egypt.

Mr. Ismail came here for a luncheon meeting with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim after two days of talks in Washington with President Nixon and Secretary of State William F. Rogers. He was understood to have urged a reduction in U.S. arms to Israel as a condition for preliminary peace talks sought by the United States.

"I want to say that my visit to the United States was very important," Mr. Ismail said. "I had a very warm, objective and fruitful discussion with the President and the secretary of state." He will also visit other world capitals.

Publicly, Mr. Ismail offered no compromise in the Egyptian position that Security Council Resolution 242, passed after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, must be the basis for peace.

In the Arab view, the resolution calls for Israeli withdrawal from all territory occupied during that war. Israel insists that partial withdrawal could satisfy the resolution's terms.

Arab sources here said that Cairo was ready to accept something less than its full demands to start talks about reopening the Suez Canal, an idea the United States has advocated as a first step toward a wider settlement. The key would be a drastic cut in U.S. arms for Israel, the sources said.

© Los Angeles Times.

Paris Vietnam Talks Start Today

(Continued from Page 1)

delegation arrived at Breigny this morning. Asked whether he would chair the conference, as the United States has proposed, backed by France and Britain, Mr. Waldheim said it would be up to the members of the conference. It will be one of the top items on the agenda during the opening meetings at the Hotel Majestic tomorrow.

Presumably, the chairman of this conference will be the person who convenes what the Canadians called the "continuing political authority" that will hear the ICCS and receive its reports.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong are favoring a rotating chairmanship between the United States and North Vietnam. And there were reports circulating today that a rotating chairmanship among the four ICCS nations might be proposed, or that France, the host country, could be asked.

Hanoi Asks 'Goodwill'

The Vietnamese themselves were not silent as the opening of the conference approached. North Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh called for "goodwill and common effort" during the conference following his arrival at Breigny yesterday.

And at a press luncheon yesterday, Mr. Lam said that the "unstated but real" importance of the conference would be to "demonstrate the peace" by providing "international peace guarantees."

Explaining this, Mr. Lam said that the real guarantee to come out of this conference would be a commitment by the big powers "not to intervene and not to encourage the parties to violate the terms of the agreement."

Mr. Lam backed the Canadian proposal for a continuing authority, which he said should have the "necessary machinery" to convene the international conference in the event of a serious threat to peace in Vietnam.

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Tin met 15 minutes this afternoon at the U.S. Embassy residence on conference questions as well as the mutual debt matters that Henry A. Kissinger said last week the two men would discuss while here. U.S. sources said another meeting would be held during the week.

Mr. Kissinger mentioned private U.S. claims on China of $50 million and Chinese assets frozen in the United States of about $70 million.

Following his meeting with Mr. Rogers today, Mr. Sharp indicated that no solution on a standing political authority was yet in sight. "The situation remains very obscure," he said. "We are prepared to make this a major issue."

French Foreign Minister Jean-Francois Cochet also spent the day receiving various foreign ministers. Following a 75-minute call at the Foreign Ministry, Mr. Cochet said that he had discussed the Canadian idea. "I cannot go into details of what we think should be decided at this hour," he said.

U.S. to Bomb

If Laos Truce Is Violated

(Continued from Page 1)

ward in fact, a fight to recapture the town could be construed as "defensive."

Whether the government forces could win back Pak Song without U.S. air support is most unlikely. They demonstrated their inability to do battle with the Communist troops on Friday. One observer said that the fight for Pak Song could be charitably described as a "snail."

Furthermore, Thai troops in the pay of the United States who have been fighting alongside the Laotians at Pak Song and elsewhere, are showing a reluctance to go into combat now that a cease-fire has become official and the United States is engaged principally in extricating itself from Laos.

Beyond the Pak Song problem, the basic hope for a period of relative peace in Laos is in the hands of the North Vietnamese government. Hanoi decides to put a good face on its intentions during the international meeting on Vietnam, which begins tomorrow in Paris, the United States would have no reason to renew the bombing.

Most diplomatic observers here, both Communists and Westerners, believe that neither of the two countries would like to be charged by the other with blatant violations of the Laotian cease-fire in an international forum.

What happens after the Paris conference ends is another matter. There is reason to believe that Hanoi will not pull all of its forces out of Laotian territory. Neither in the Vietnam agreement worked out by Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, nor in the Laotian peace accord, is the presence of North Vietnamese troops in Laos even mentioned.

Laotian military leaders are deeply concerned about what they consider this intentional omission in the two documents.

There are, at present, an estimated 65,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in Laos.

By Don

Shannon

curry advice to President Anwar

Sadat of Egypt.

Mr. Ismail came here for a luncheon meeting with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim after two days of talks in Washington with President Nixon and Secretary of State William F. Rogers. He was understood to have urged a reduction in U.S. arms to Israel as a condition for preliminary peace talks sought by the United States.

"I want to say that my visit to the United States was very important," Mr. Ismail said. "I had a very warm, objective and fruitful discussion with the President and the secretary of state." He will also visit other world capitals.

Publicly, Mr. Ismail offered no compromise in the Egyptian position that Security Council Resolution 242, passed after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, must be the basis for peace.

In the Arab view, the resolution calls for Israeli withdrawal from all territory occupied during that war. Israel insists that partial withdrawal could satisfy the resolution's terms.

Arab sources here said that Cairo was ready to accept something less than its full demands to start talks about reopening the Suez Canal, an idea the United States has advocated as a first step toward a wider settlement. The key would be a drastic cut in U.S. arms for Israel, the sources said.

© Los Angeles Times.

Communists Delay Notifying U.S. of Next Release of POWs

SAIGON, Feb. 25 (AP). —The Communists delayed today to give the United States a list of the American prisoners scheduled for release this week in North and South Vietnam or to fix a specific day, time and place to hand them over, U.S. spokesmen said.

No official reason was given. But the Communist side was embittered by stone-throwing, banner-waving, shouting mobs of South Vietnamese, numbering in the hundreds, who attacked North Vietnamese compounds in the northern South Vietnamese cities of Hue and Da Nang today. The demonstrations apparently were tacitly sanctioned by the Saigon government but got out of hand.

Seven North Vietnamese delegates to the Four-Party Joint Military Commission and two South Vietnamese policemen were reported injured. The chief spokesman for the North Vietnamese delegation, Col. Bul Tin, said that four Communist delegates were seriously wounded in the Hue demonstration.

North Vietnam's official news agency said that "a gang of thugs hired by the Saigon administration" was behind the injuries in Hue.

Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency said that the "thugs" broke into the delegation office and "carried off two briefcases, 21 radios, nine uniforms and many other things."

Col. Tin said, however, that he did not think the demonstrations would affect the Americans' release, expected Tuesday by U.S. officials.

Although declaring that South Vietnam "is now on the verge of a very dangerous situation," Col. Tin said that North Vietnam is "determined to abide by the peace agreement and the protocols."

He indicated that one major problem still unresolved is a dispute between the Communist side and the Saigon government over the release of Vietnamese civilian prisoners.

"While we sympathize with the families of the American POWs, I want to remind you that here in Vietnam there are thousands of families waiting for their kin to return from detention," Col. Tin said. "We want to satisfy this sentiment and bring them back together."

The Saigon government, he said, still has not decided whether it will release civilian prisoners along with the military POWs to be released this week.

Maj. Gen. Daniel James, a top spokesman at the Pentagon, in Washington, refused to tie the delay on the list to the troubles at Hue and said:

"We are still expanding the list tomorrow," Gen. James said.

He said that he understood that North Vietnamese and Viet Cong representatives in Saigon told Maj. Gen. Gilbert Woodward, the chief U.S. representative on the Joint Military Commission, that they were having trouble communicating with their people in the field.

Other sources, however, express

curry advice to President Anwar

Sadat of Egypt.

Mr. Ismail came here for a luncheon meeting with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim after two days of talks in Washington with President Nixon and Secretary of State William F. Rogers. He was understood to have urged a reduction in U.S. arms to Israel as a condition for preliminary peace talks sought by the United States.

"I want to say that my visit to the United States was very important," Mr. Ismail said. "I had a very warm, objective and fruitful discussion with the President and the secretary of state." He will also visit other world capitals.

Publicly, Mr. Ismail offered no compromise in the Egyptian position that Security Council Resolution 242, passed after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, must be the basis for peace.

In the Arab view, the resolution calls for Israeli withdrawal from all territory occupied during that war. Israel insists that partial withdrawal could satisfy the resolution's terms.

Arab sources here said that Cairo was ready to accept something less than its full demands to start talks about reopening the Suez Canal, an idea the United States has advocated as a first step toward a wider settlement. The key would be a drastic cut in U.S. arms for Israel, the sources said.

© Los Angeles Times.

U.S. to Bomb If Laos Truce Is Violated

(Continued from Page 1)

ward in fact, a fight to recapture the town could be construed as "defensive."

Whether the government forces could win back Pak Song without U.S. air support is most unlikely. They demonstrated their inability to do battle with the Communist troops on Friday. One observer said that the fight for Pak Song could be charitably described as a "snail."

Furthermore, Thai troops in the pay of the United States who have been fighting alongside the Laotians at Pak Song and elsewhere, are showing a reluctance to go into combat now that a cease-fire has become official and the United States is engaged principally in extricating itself from Laos.

Beyond the Pak Song problem, the basic hope for a period of relative peace in Laos is in the hands of the North Vietnamese government. Hanoi decides to put a good face on its intentions during the international meeting on Vietnam, which begins tomorrow in Paris, the United States would have no reason to renew the bombing.

Most diplomatic observers here, both Communists and Westerners, believe that neither of the two countries would like to be charged by the other with blatant violations of the Laotian cease-fire in an international forum.

What happens after the Paris conference ends is another matter. There is reason to believe that Hanoi will not pull all of its forces out of Laotian territory. Neither in the Vietnam agreement worked out by Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, nor in the Laotian peace accord, is the presence of North Vietnamese troops in Laos even mentioned.

Laot

Ex-POWs See War Aims Fulfilled, Their Detention Not Spent in Vain

By Steven V. Roberts

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 25 (NYT).—A series of news conferences across the country Friday, former prisoners of war insisted that the Vietnam War had succeeded in accomplishing U.S. aims, and that their years in captivity had not been in vain.

Some sharply criticized the anti-war movement and the idea of amnesty for draft evaders. But they denied reports that some prisoners were considered "collaborators" by their fellow POWs for making anti-American statements while in captivity. And none said that they knew about reported plans to bring charges against returning POWs who had made such statements.

Several Americans, while held prisoner in Indochina, had signed statements and given interviews that criticized the U.S. conduct of the war. The New York Times reported Friday that they continued to do so, even after they had been ordered to stop by senior officers in the prison camps. Lt. Col. Carlyle S. Harris, speaking at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama, acknowledged that there had been some "minor arguments" in the camps, but, otherwise, the show of unity didn't crack, he said.

The news conference took place at a naval hospital here and at six other hospitals where former POWs were receiving medical examinations and talking to intelligence officers. In all, the news conferences involved no more than a score of the 133 U.S. prisoners of war so far released by the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong.

The Pentagon decided late Thursday to hold the conferences after newsmen around the country had persistently requested a chance to question the prisoners. It was felt that the men were in good enough shape to withstand the experience even before most of them finished their medical examinations. The whole show was clearly well-organized by the military, but the men vehemently insisted that they had not been told what to say.

The conferences were held at Brooke Army Medical Center, San Antonio, Texas; Fitzsimons Army Hospital, Aurora, Colo.; Ireland Army Hospital, Fort Knox, Ky.; Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco; Maxwell Air Force Base Hospital, Montgomery, Ala.; and the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth, Va.

The conferences represented the first real chance in almost two weeks for the news media to question the returning prisoners, but most of them refused to discuss conditions in the prison camps. They contended that adverse publicity might hinder the swift release of the remaining prisoners.

Chained and Caged

One who did talk about his experiences was Sgt. Ken Wallingford, who was at Brooke General Hospital in Texas. Sgt. Wallingford, who was taken prisoner in South Vietnam in April, said he had been kept in a cage with a 10-foot chain locked to his ankle most of the time.

Almost all of the men who spoke were held prisoner in North Vietnam, including the three who appeared here: Capt. Howard E. Rutledge, Capt. James B. Stockdale, the senior naval officer held in the North, and Capt. Harry T. Jenkins Jr. All were Navy pilots shot down in the fall of 1965.

Despite the disillusionment with the war that has occurred in the country since they left, the men agreed enthusiastically with Capt. Jenkins' "when he said, 'We started out to assure the self-determination of the Vietnamese people and I think we have. I really don't believe we wasted our efforts.'"

But the view was not completely shared, even in their own families. As one wife put it recently: "It's hard to believe that eight years was worth it."

'Shamed Our Nation'

Capt. Jenkins, 45, who wore his hair in a crew cut, added that he was "a little disgruntled" at what he called a "small minority" of protesters who opposed the war. He said that he was "a little disgruntled" at what he called a "small minority" of protesters who opposed the war.

When asked about amnesty, Capt. Jenkins said, "I don't know a single man who fought in this war who would accept amnesty and I don't know why anyone would fight who should be offered amnesty." The small crowd of military people watching the news conference burst out into applause.

Doctors here report that the main medical problems of the men involve bad teeth and intestinal parasites, but that their general health is good. Capt. Stockdale called the condition a "tribute to American vigor and self-esteem."

Asked about the changes they had noticed in American society, Capt. Jenkins replied: "I find it a little disconcerting to find women wearing pants and men wearing women's hair styles." But their main concern seemed to be their families. Capt. Rutledge, who became a grandfather in captivity, said, "We all want to catch up with our families. They've all outgrown us. They're kind of new to us, and we're kind of new to them."

Army Drops Case Against a POW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (UPI).—In a potentially far-reaching legal decision announced Friday, the Army has dismissed court-martial charges against a prisoner of war set free Feb. 12 by the Viet Cong. The soldier had been accused before his capture almost three years ago of assault against a fellow GI in Vietnam.

An Army spokesman said no punitive action will be taken against Spec. 4 Keith A. Albert, 23, of Thibodaux, La. The spokesman gave no reason why the charges were dropped, but Army sources said it was because officials felt Spec. Albert already had suffered enough as a POW.

The ruling was the first involving charges against a former POW.

Two GIs released with Spec. Albert were considered absent without leave at the time they were captured. The Army has not yet ruled in their cases.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT—Hidden camera in Marietta, Ga., bank took this picture Friday morning before one of the bandits blasted both of the bank's cameras with a shotgun. Witnesses said the two long-haired men walked in and shouted: "Okay, this is a holdup. Everybody hit the floor." Note man on floor behind desk at right. The two bandits afterwards made getaway with an unspecified amount of money.

Hartke Parody: 'Fly Me, but Don't Frisk Me'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—"I'm Vance. Fly me. But don't frisk me," reads the full-page item in the Republican newsletter "Monday."

Sen. Vance Hartke, D., Ind., appears happy with the publicity. The item, a take-off on those airline ads that proclaim "I'm Carolyn, Fly me," is aimed at the senator's refusal to submit to airline security checks.

The accompanying text notes that Sen. Hartke said in raising a constitutional challenge to the security checks, "As a person I do not object to a search. As a senator, I do object."

Sen. Hartke told the Senate earlier this month that he considers the searches a constitutional threat to the civil liberties of travelers but has decided to submit to them "under protest."

Sen. Hartke told the Senate earlier this month that he considers the searches a constitutional threat to the civil liberties of travelers but has decided to submit to them "under protest."

Eagleton Questions Mailing By Envoy of Tribute to Nixon

By Marilyn Berger

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (WP).—A letter in praise of President Nixon's "strong but quiet leadership," printed on State Department stationery and signed by U.S. Ambassador in London Walter Annenberg, has prompted questions about the use of public money "for an activity that could lead itself to partisan interpretation."

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D., Mo., has asked Secretary of State William P. Rogers for an explanation of the letter, which was brought to his attention by a constituent and which he said "appears to be part of a mass mailing using Department of State letterhead."

With Mr. Annenberg's letter, dated Feb. 5, 1973, and beginning simply "Dear Sir," were enclosed two editorials from London newspapers which he said were "of great interest."

He said in the letter: "In my judgment these articles are significant not only in terms of their own merit, but because they rebut the claims made in some quarters that our allies had turned against us in the days preceding the Vietnam cease-fire and were critical of the President." He added that he believed the editorials reflect the opinion of large numbers of British people and "center attention on President Nixon's strong but quiet leadership."

One editorial on Mr. Nixon, from the London Sunday Express of Jan. 31, 1973, spoke of "tendrils and left-wingers" who "turn their venom on him as the tyrant in the White House." With tears in their eyes, the same individuals dream of the golden age when handsome Jack Kennedy made Washington take Camelot. Then, instead of Mr. Nixon's cottage chess, there was salmon cooked in champagne. Instead of folk songs and baseball players there were Bach and philosophers. All that and Jackie, too."

The editorial went on to contrast Mr. Kennedy's record with Mr. Nixon's on Vietnam, on the blacks, on the universities, the economy. The incumbent, in this

Head of U.S. Maritime Union To Retire and Get $1 Million

By Damon Stetson

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT).—Joseph Curran, the $95,000-a-year president of the National Maritime Union who has indicated that he does not intend to seek re-election, will be able to retire with nearly a million dollars in severance pay and lump-sum pension benefits, according to union sources.

The magnitude of these potential retirement benefits, among the largest ever reported for a union leader, has stirred criticism among dissident members preparing to challenge a Curran-endorsed slate in the union election scheduled between April 2 and May 31.

The union pension plan reportedly has been approved by the Internal Revenue Service as well as by the union's membership. The dissidents contend, however, that the retirement benefits are excessive for a relatively small national union hard hit by the reduced merchant marine and now claiming 50,000 members, with 28,000 employed on ships.

"For a guy to walk off with a million bucks from one of the smallest national unions is obscene," said James M. Morrissey, a long-time critic of Curran and candidate for president of the union.

Mr. Curran has until Wednesday to change his mind about running again, but at the union's convention last fall he said that he had received medical advice against seeking a 16th term. Now 65 years old, he founded the union in 1936.

Earlier this month he notified the trustees of the union's pension fund that he intended to retire on March 1, and that he assumed his application would be processed promptly.

Manson Follower Warns Jury That He Is 'at War'

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25 (UPI).—A member of the Charles Manson "family" told a jury Friday that they had better pray he never got out of prison because he was "at war" with them.

Bobby Beausoleil, 24, who is serving a life sentence for murder, was called to testify at the trial of four other Manson cult members who have been convicted of armed robbery in holding up a store to get firearms to free Manson and other jailed followers.

The jury was deciding what penalty should be inflicted on Catherine Share and three other defendants. Beausoleil was called to prove they had little will of their own and were acting under his influence.

Beausoleil was asked whether Miss Share was able to conform to the laws of society. "No more than I am," he said. "I am at war with everyone in this courtroom, except four people (the defendants). It's nothing personal. But society has been grabbing up my brothers and eating them. You better pray I don't get out."

The jury returned its verdict after two days of deliberations. The panel was unable to reach a verdict on similar charges against Sharon Grutke, 23, a former small-town beauty queen who has lived with Barger for several years.

Police said they discovered the narcotics in Barger's home in the Oakland Hills on May 27 when he was arrested as a suspect in the murder of a Texas narcotics courier. He was acquitted of the murder charge after a long trial which ended in December.

Myrdals Touring China

HONG KONG, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—Mrs. Alva Myrdal, Sweden's minister without portfolio in charge of disarmament, has arrived in Peking on a tour of China, the Chinese New Agency reported today, accompanied by her husband, Prof. Gunnar Myrdal.

The blast in a concrete building the size of a city block that houses the base's transformer plant left most of the ocean-side facility without power. Other electrical equipment was shut down as a precautionary measure.

An Air Force spokesman said the power would be turned back on after a system-by-system check that might turn up a clue as to the nature of the explosion. Sabotage was ruled out.

Hickam adjoins Honolulu International Airport, but the blast did not affect operations there. The 2,500-acre base accommodates about 8,000 persons, most of them military personnel.

A State Department spokesman said Friday that the letter had just been received and that officials there were looking into the matter to prepare a reply to the senator. Mr. Annenberg would not discuss the matter on the telephone.

Proposes 'Compassion That Works'

Anti-Poverty Policies of '60s 'Almost Utopian,' Nixon Says

By John M. Crewdson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (NYT).

President Nixon, criticizing what he called "sometimes almost utopian" attempts by the federal government to eradicate hunger, poverty and discrimination in the 1960s, pledged his second administration yesterday to underwrite social programs that he said would "give people the assistance they need without taking away their freedom or decreasing their self-reliance and their self-respect."

In a prerecorded radio address, Mr. Nixon said that the completion of "one of the most useful missions ever undertaken by one nation in the defense of another"—an allusion to the American involvement in Vietnam—would now permit the country to turn its attention "more fully to the works of compassion, concern and social progress at home."

As evidence of his intention to meet the challenge, the President cited what he called "the record level of funding for human resources programs" proposed last month in his budget for the fiscal year 1974, which starts July 1.

He noted that the $125 billion allocated for such programs was "nearly twice the amount that was being spent" when he took office in 1969, but maintained that the increased expenditures did not carry with them the assumption of earlier administrations "that any human problem would be solved simply by throwing enough federal dollars at it."

Referring to the Johnson administration's anti-poverty programs, Mr. Nixon said:

"Those who make a profession of poverty got fat; the taxpayers got stuck with the bill and the disadvantaged themselves got little but broken promises." He added:

"We must do better than this. The American people deserve compassion that works, not simple compassion that means well. They deserve programs that say yes to human needs by saying no to paternalism, social exploitation and waste."

Yesterday's address was the fourth in a series on his State of the Union reports.

Reforms Criticized

A number of the proposed reforms Mr. Nixon referred to have been bitterly criticized, especially the decision to dismantle the Office of Economic Opportunity created by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Although the intentions behind such efforts as the OEO were "laudable," the President said, "the results in case after case amounted to dismal failure." He contended that federal money leaving Washington "in a seemingly inexhaustible flood" was often reduced to "a mere trickle" by the time it reached those it was intended to help and blamed "bureaucrats, consultants and social workers" for this.

Part of the solution, Mr. Nixon suggested, was to replace such "narrow, fragmented, categorical" programs as those for education and manpower training, until now "closely controlled from Washington," with special revenue-sharing grants to be used as "each state and community judges best to meet its own special needs."

The President also recommended that other programs "whose job is done," such as federal subsidies for hospital construction, should be eliminated and the savings shifted to more productive areas, such as research on cancer and heart disease.

He predicted that the breakup of the OEO and the distribution of its functions to other executive departments would make its programs "more efficient by linking them with other related federal activities."

'Fed' Raises Discount Rate To 5 1/2 Percent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Board Friday increased its discount rate, the interest it charges member banks for borrowing, from 5 percent to 5 1/2 percent in an effort to further "the objectives of economic stabilization."

The "Fed" took the step after a lengthy session and said that it was "in recognition of a recent rise in short-term, open-market interest rates."

The board had increased the rate from 4 1/2 to 5 percent on Jan. 12.

A move upward in the discount rate usually is a signal that the nation's central bank is moving toward tighter money.

Baccarat
The Crystal of Kings
Since 1764
you are cordially invited to visit our museum & retail showroom (Dollars accepted)
30 bis Rue de Paradis, Paris-10e.
Tel.: 770-64-30.
Open daily (except Sundays),
9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Métros: Polignac & Gare de l'Est.

Teasers for Travelers
PITRIZZA
What is it?
A mini-Pizza? Some kind of Italian meeting place?
It's Italian, that's plain.
But exactly what? That's the question. One clue. It's an experience you'll never forget. And you can't eat it.
Do you know it?
Answer p. 5

After the theatre...
EAT, DRINK AND BEAM MERRY
JIM BEAM
The world's finest Bourbon since 1795
50 PROOF KENTUCKY STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKY DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY THE JAMES B. BEAM DISTILLING CO., COLUMBIANA, KY.

at Flaine
only pedestrian and ski traffic
Cars are left in the parking lot at the entrance to the resort. The kids love it here. And so will you, with ski slopes and lifts virtually at your doorstep. Flaine the international snow resort. In a class by itself. Haute-Savoie France (Geneva 44 miles).

Flaws in Prosecution System Will Benefit Draft Dodgers

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25 (NYT).—Despite President Nixon's pledge that there will be no amnesty for draft resisters, a number of young Americans who fled to Canada and Europe to avoid military service during the Vietnam war will go unpunished because of breakdowns in the methods of prosecuting them.

It also appears that many of these individuals are unaware that they can return to the United States without facing prosecution. A U.S. attorney here said that the inadvertent destruction of some files of presumed draft-law violators who had reached the age of 26 meant that "they simply can't be prosecuted now."

There are also situations where the Selective Service System has violated its own rules in processing individuals that has resulted in the dismissal of a number of indictments or not-guilty verdicts over the last several years. Some men in Canada would fall into this category.

In addition, two appellate court decisions relating to accelerated processing of potential inductees will mean that other presumed law violators cannot be prosecuted.

ad. This is referred to as the "order of call" defense. A man called out of order cannot be punished for refusing to report, the decisions state.

Furthermore, Patrick McGarvey, a Selective Service information official, says he knows of cases where men with high draft lottery numbers left the country but have not violated the law because their numbers were never called.

There is no way to determine how many individuals will be affected by these facts, which were discovered in an examination of the status of draft-law prosecutions here. San Francisco was the scene of many refusals to accept induction during the Vietnam war. However, Vince O'Connor, of the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors here, said that there are "many, many thousands who can return, but don't know it yet."

According to Mr. McGarvey, there are "just under 6,000" potential draft-law violators now. He said that "about 4,500 are fugitives," with "2,400 estimated to be in Canada or overseas." In addition, 6,000 cases are under investigation by the FBI, he added.

However, his committee estimates that 50,000 men have fled to Canada or Europe. The group began a "repatriation" program last year, but Mr. O'Connor said it will move into full gear now since a Vietnam cease-fire has been signed and the Selective Service stopped drafting men in December.

The committee will use draft counselors and lawyers to investigate the requests of potential returnees as to their status. Although some individuals cannot be prosecuted for refusing to serve, they could still be taken to court for either failing to keep the draft board informed of a current mailing address or failing to take a physical examination.

A federal judge here said that the number of "prosecutions will drop because prosecuting authorities will screen the cases much more carefully before taking the cases to a grand jury." He added, "It's sort of like beating a dead dog."

at Flaine
toast Mont Blanc with a "vin chaud" at 8,200 ft
When you step out of the cable car, 8,200 ft. up, pay your own respects to the Giant of the Alps. He looks so close across the valley, you could almost tip glasses together. Flaine the international snow resort. In a class by itself. Haute Savoie France-Geneva 44 miles french engl. germ. span. ital. port. dutch. dan. norw. swed. pol. rus. czech. serb. hung. rom. grek. arab. jap. chin.

TRANSLATIONS
44 r. N. D. des-Vicaires
Paris 21 - CEN. 73-03
Agents wanted everywhere

Was Lookout for Bootleg Diggers

Italian Says He Saw Met's Vase at Etruscan Site

By Nicholas Gage

CERVETERI, Italy, Feb. 25 (UPI).—A man believed to be the chief witness in the investigation by Italian authorities into the purchase of a 2,500-year-old Greek vase by New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art was located here yesterday. He said he had been present when pieces of the vase were dug up from an Etruscan tomb.

Museum officials and Robert F. Hecht, Jr., the American expatriate who sold them the vase, have said it belonged to Dikran A. Sarrafian, a Lebanese art dealer.

Mr. Sarrafian said in Beirut Wednesday that he had turned over a box full of pieces of a Greek vase to Mr. Hecht to sell but could not remember what was on the pieces except that they contained "paintings of Greeks and a lot of inscriptions." He said also that an archaeologist friend had looked at the inscriptions some years ago and told him that they included the name of the Greek master painter Euphronios, which appears on the museum's vase.

Col. Felice Mambro, head of the Carabinieri's art squad, said last week that he had information that the vase Mr. Hecht sold to the museum had been smuggled out of Italy, along with a second Euphronios work, a cup, which was said to depict the same scene as on the vase.

A Euphronios cup has been offered for sale to the Metropolitan by Mr. Hecht, the London Observer reported today. Yesterday, The New York Times disclosed that Dikran Sarrafian, the museum's curator of Greek and Roman art, had shown scholars a photograph of a hitherto unknown cup, portraying the death of Sarpedon—the same subject as the one on the Metropolitan's vase. The Observer said the cup was known to have been kept until recently in a safe-deposit box in Zurich under Mr. Hecht's name. It said this had been confirmed by Mr. von Bothmer, who said, "I very much want it—it would mean so much more to me."

(Detective Sgt. Robert Volpe of the New York City Police Department art squad said yesterday that he had begun an investigation on the cup at the request of the Italian police. He added that he had asked the museum to give him copies of the black and white slides shown by Mr. von Bothmer. Sgt. Volpe confirmed that the Italians had told him that Mr. Hecht had offered the cup for sale.)

In an interview yesterday, Armando Genere, 37, said that he was a lookout for six bootleg diggers who, he said, discovered the vase in November, 1971, in an area northeast of here known as Sant'Angelo. It is about 25 miles from here and the site of several thousand Etruscan tombs.

Giuseppe Lojaceo, Mr. Hecht's lawyer, said he had yesterday Mr. Genere was known as a man whose words could not be trusted and who was practically illiterate.

Mr. Genere said that he worked primarily as a farmhand and mason, but sometimes when he was out of work he joined squads of "tombaroli," unauthorized excavators who dig illegally for antiquities and sell what they turn up.

Finding himself without a job in mid-November of 1971, he said, he joined a group of tombaroli digging at Sant'Angelo. After several days, he said, they unearthed the base and a handle of what turned out to be a Greek vase.

At that point, he continued, he was assigned to be the lookout while the others went on digging, mostly during the daytime. As they dug, the group discovered more pieces of a vase as well as other items and they knew they had hit on a new tomb, he said.

It took eight days to dig out everything from the tomb, which included many pieces of pottery and a statue of a winged sphinx, he said. He said he had been shown some of the pieces as they were dug up and the one he remembered most had "a figure of a man bleeding."

Mr. Genere described the piece as "bigger than a man's hand," adding that it contained almost the entire figure from the head to midway above the knees.

The front of the vase in the Metropolitan shows the body of the warrior Sarpedon, a casualty of the Trojan War, as it is being carried from the battlefield by Sleep and Death while the god Hermes watches. There are three wide wounds on the body—at the heart, in the stomach and in the right leg, from which streams of blood are gushing.

Mr. Genere was shown a picture of the vase and picked out the dead figure of Sarpedon, rarely portrayed in Greek art, as what he had seen on the piece of vase at Sant'Angelo in 1971. He said he made the same identification for Domènec Jose, the deputy prosecutor in charge of the vase investigation.

He said that the picture Mr. Jose had shown him was in black and white, adding that the color picture shown him during the interview revealed the figure more as he remembered seeing it. Mr. Genere said that he also remembered pieces from the top border of the vase. "This was in a lot of small pieces when I saw it," he said, looking at the border.

Received $8,800

The findings from the tomb, he said, were taken by the leaders of the group, whom he knew only as Peppe and Adriano. They told him, Mr. Genere said, that they would give him a fair share of what the findings brought, and the following month, he said, he received $3 million lire (about $880) in installments over a two-week period.

He said that he suspected he had not gotten a fair share when his accountants began buying cars, apartments and land that they could not have afforded with only $8,800. Therefore, he said, he willingly told the authorities everything he knew.

The Deputy Prosecutor's Office disclosed Friday that four unidentified persons had been advised to retain defense counsel. Mr. Hecht's lawyer said that his client had not been among the four notified by the prosecutor.

The Metropolitan acquired the vase, a crater used for mixing wine with water at banquets—in November for $1 million but declined at that time to identify the seller. Museum officials said the vase had come from a European collection, which it could not identify without risking chances for future purchases from it.

Important persons approached the magistrate and said: "There exists a government committee with the function of dealing precisely with what you're interested in. We've thought that you should be appointed a member of this committee." Mr. Infelisi answered that, to his knowledge, the committee existed only on paper and that he preferred to work alone.

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Wiretap-Probe Papers Vanish From Judge's Office in Rome

By Piero Sanavio

ROME, Feb. 25 (UPI).—Magistrate Luciano Infelisi discovered during the weekend the disappearance from his office of his papers on his four-month-old probe of widespread private telephone tapping in Rome.

The probe had threatened to expose a major scandal in the private machine-tapping behind Italian public life. As a result of Magistrate Infelisi's investigations, five private detectives, including the chiefs of some of Rome's leading investigative agencies, a telephone company official and an unidentified person were named Feb. 14 in charges that could bring them three to five years' imprisonment.

It was not known immediately how their cases and the overall probe of private telephone tapping would be affected by the disappearance of Mr. Infelisi's investigation documents.

Their loss was not the first difficulty encountered by the young judge since his probe began in October.

He had endeavored to keep his investigation secret, but information about it was leaked to the Italian press and he launched a probe within his office to discover the source of the leak.

Threats to Him, Family

When the existence of his investigation became public knowledge, the magistrate received an anonymous letter advising him "to drop the matter." The letter made veiled threats to himself and his family. "We know," the writer said, "that you are a family man."

Shortly afterward, the truck carrying instruments used to locate private telephone-bugging devices was broken into twice.

It became increasingly difficult for the judge to obtain police help in his probe: The two carabinieri assigned to assist him would be changed every day, for no apparent reason.

Important persons approached the magistrate and said: "There exists a government committee with the function of dealing precisely with what you're interested in. We've thought that you should be appointed a member of this committee." Mr. Infelisi answered that, to his knowledge, the committee existed only on paper and that he preferred to work alone.

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Wiretap-Probe Papers Vanish From Judge's Office in Rome

By Piero Sanavio

ROME, Feb. 25 (UPI).—Magistrate Luciano Infelisi discovered during the weekend the disappearance from his office of his papers on his four-month-old probe of widespread private telephone tapping in Rome.

The probe had threatened to expose a major scandal in the private machine-tapping behind Italian public life. As a result of Magistrate Infelisi's investigations, five private detectives, including the chiefs of some of Rome's leading investigative agencies, a telephone company official and an unidentified person were named Feb. 14 in charges that could bring them three to five years' imprisonment.

It was not known immediately how their cases and the overall probe of private telephone tapping would be affected by the disappearance of Mr. Infelisi's investigation documents.

Their loss was not the first difficulty encountered by the young judge since his probe began in October.

He had endeavored to keep his investigation secret, but information about it was leaked to the Italian press and he launched a probe within his office to discover the source of the leak.

Threats to Him, Family

When the existence of his investigation became public knowledge, the magistrate received an anonymous letter advising him "to drop the matter." The letter made veiled threats to himself and his family. "We know," the writer said, "that you are a family man."

Shortly afterward, the truck carrying instruments used to locate private telephone-bugging devices was broken into twice.

It became increasingly difficult for the judge to obtain police help in his probe: The two carabinieri assigned to assist him would be changed every day, for no apparent reason.

Important persons approached the magistrate and said: "There exists a government committee with the function of dealing precisely with what you're interested in. We've thought that you should be appointed a member of this committee." Mr. Infelisi answered that, to his knowledge, the committee existed only on paper and that he preferred to work alone.

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Wiretap-Probe Papers Vanish From Judge's Office in Rome

By Piero Sanavio

ROME, Feb. 25 (UPI).—Magistrate Luciano Infelisi discovered during the weekend the disappearance from his office of his papers on his four-month-old probe of widespread private telephone tapping in Rome.

The probe had threatened to expose a major scandal in the private machine-tapping behind Italian public life. As a result of Magistrate Infelisi's investigations, five private detectives, including the chiefs of some of Rome's leading investigative agencies, a telephone company official and an unidentified person were named Feb. 14 in charges that could bring them three to five years' imprisonment.

It was not known immediately how their cases and the overall probe of private telephone tapping would be affected by the disappearance of Mr. Infelisi's investigation documents.

Their loss was not the first difficulty encountered by the young judge since his probe began in October.

He had endeavored to keep his investigation secret, but information about it was leaked to the Italian press and he launched a probe within his office to discover the source of the leak.

Threats to Him, Family

When the existence of his investigation became public knowledge, the magistrate received an anonymous letter advising him "to drop the matter." The letter made veiled threats to himself and his family. "We know," the writer said, "that you are a family man."

Shortly afterward, the truck carrying instruments used to locate private telephone-bugging devices was broken into twice.

It became increasingly difficult for the judge to obtain police help in his probe: The two carabinieri assigned to assist him would be changed every day, for no apparent reason.

Important persons approached the magistrate and said: "There exists a government committee with the function of dealing precisely with what you're interested in. We've thought that you should be appointed a member of this committee." Mr. Infelisi answered that, to his knowledge, the committee existed only on paper and that he preferred to work alone.

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Targets of the telephone taps are said to have included banks, newspapers, politicians, private citizens well known in public life, two police barracks, major industrial concerns. Justice Ministry sources have said that various organizations have been behind the tapping, which involved political and financial espionage. Premier Giulio Andreotti has promised that those responsible will be "severely punished."

Gen. Francisco Franco and Argentine President Alejandro Lanusse riding through Madrid streets Saturday.

Argentine Chief Visits Franco

MADRID, Feb. 25 (AP).—President Alejandro Lanusse of Argentina and Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain met privately yesterday to cement trade relations. They apparently sidestepped the issue of Juan J. Peron, the Argentine dictator who has been in exile in Spain since 1960.

Sources insisted that the two leaders centered their conversation on trade and diplomatic matters and did not mention Mr. Peron, reported to be absent from the country, whose followers are challenging Lt. Gen. Lanusse's government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Argentine Chief Visits Franco

MADRID, Feb. 25 (AP).—President Alejandro Lanusse of Argentina and Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain met privately yesterday to cement trade relations. They apparently sidestepped the issue of Juan J. Peron, the Argentine dictator who has been in exile in Spain since 1960.

Sources insisted that the two leaders centered their conversation on trade and diplomatic matters and did not mention Mr. Peron, reported to be absent from the country, whose followers are challenging Lt. Gen. Lanusse's government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to increase social benefits for widows, the aged and the unemployed. That package matched a similar pledge by Fine Gael government in elections in three weeks.

Gen. Lanusse, starting a four-day official visit, met Gen. Franco in the generalissimo's palace on Madrid's outskirts not far from Mr. Peron's home in the Spanish capital, Gen. Lanusse arrived earlier yesterday to a warm reception from Gen. Franco and thousands of cheering Spaniards.

During his visit, Gen. Lanusse was scheduled to sign an agreement for the Spanish-financed purchase of $140 million worth of ships by the state-controlled Argentine Shipping Co.

But a Flannery spokesman pointed out that both sides had been taken before Mr. Lynch unveiled a sweeping tax concession program coupled with higher social benefits, a plan to legalize birth control and proposed legislation on women's rights.

Mr. Lynch pledged his government to abolish property taxes on homes and at the same time to

Obituaries

Dr. Dickinson W. Richards,
Nobel Laureate in Medicine

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT).—Dr. Dickinson W. Richards, 77, Nobel laureate in medicine and physiology in 1958, whose work on cardiac physiology helped pave the way to open-heart surgery that has saved the lives of thousands of patients throughout the world, died Friday at his home in Lakeville, Conn.

Dr. Richards was Lambert professor of medicine emeritus and special lecturer in medicine at Yale University at the time of his death.

He shared the Nobel Prize with another Columbia professor of medicine, Dr. André F. Courmand, and with Dr. Werner Forssmann of Germany. They were cited for their work in exploring with a thin tube the interior functioning of the human heart; they were credited with providing a new technique for cardiology, including the diagnosis and treatment of heart disease.

Yale Graduate

Dr. Richards was born in Orange, N.J., Oct. 30, 1895, graduated from Yale in 1917 and received an M.A. degree in physiology from Columbia University in 1922 and his M.D. from its College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1923. In World War I, he had served as a lieutenant with the American Expeditionary Force.

He was fellow at the National Institute for Medical Research in London in 1927-28 and then served as an attending physician at Presbyterian Hospital here until 1945.

He was president of the Harvey Society and the Association of American Physicians in 1962 and fellow of many other medical organizations here and abroad.

Manuel (Caracol) Ortega

MADRID, Feb. 25 (UPI).—Manuel (Caracol) Ortega, 62, one of Spain's top flamenco singers, died last night in a car crash on a superhighway near here, police reported. His chauffeur was injured in the accident, which was caused by a gust of wind hurling the car against a pylon.

Mr. Ortega was born in a Seville slum and won his first flamenco singing competition at the age of 11. The gipsy youth soon gained national prominence and acclaim as one of history's greatest interpreters of the "cante jondo," the "profound" way of singing the flamenco.

For many years, Mr. Ortega was the male lead singer in the flamenco troupe of Lola Flores. He was also one of the closest friends of Manuel (Manolete) Rodríguez, considered by many as the greatest bullfighter in history, who died in the Linares bullring in 1947.

"Caracol" (the snail), as Mr. Ortega was known to his fans, was awarded one of Spain's highest decorations, the Cross of Isabel the Catholic, five years ago.

Engen Rosenstock-Huussy
NORWICH, Vt., Feb. 25 (AP).—Dr. Engen Rosenstock-Huussy, 84, professor of social philosophy at Dartmouth College, author and historian, died yesterday at his home.

Dr. Rosenstock-Huussy came to the United States from Germany in 1933. Most of his achievements were in the field of voluntary service. He also was regarded as founder of the Peace Corps concept.

In the 1930s, he helped establish work camps in Silesia, Germany. In the United States, he founded the William James camp in Sharon, Vt., where Civilian Conservation Corps leaders were trained until that Depression-era agency was dissolved.

Walter Reade Jr.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP).—Walter Reade Jr., 56, a motion picture executive, died yesterday in St. Moritz, Switzerland, of injuries sustained in a skiing accident.

Mr. Reade was president and chairman of the board of the Walter Reade Organization, Inc., which produces and distributes films and operates more than 80 theaters in the United States and Britain.

Mr. Reade was executive pro-

Four Face Trial
For Carrying Off
Pétain's Body

LES SABLES-D'OLONNE, France, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—Four men were charged yesterday with desecrating a tomb and removing the body of Marshal Philippe Pétain, head of the French Vichy government under the Nazi occupation, from its grave on the lonely Isle d'Yeu, in the Atlantic Ocean.

The charge is a misdemeanor, carrying a maximum penalty of six months in prison.

The four charged were Pierre Carreau, Pierre Dumas, Hubert Massol and François Boux-de-Casson, a former deputy.

Mr. Carreau and Mr. Boux-de-Casson are members of a far-right splinter group known as the Republican Alliance, which has about 100 members.

The removal of Marshal Pétain's body from its tomb on the small island of Yeu, where he was imprisoned after the Second World War for his part in helping the Germans while heading the Vichy government, was discovered last week and led to a nationwide search.

Those involved in removing the body indicated they wanted him reburied in a place of honor, such as the national veterans' cemetery at Douaumont, near Verdun, in eastern France, where he commanded the German invasion in World War I. The body has been returned to the Isle d'Yeu.

Messmer Sees
Leftists Ending
European Unity

MULHOUSE, France, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—Prime Minister Pierre Messmer said yesterday that if the left wins next month's French National Assembly elections, it would mean the end of work toward European unity.

In an election campaign speech here, Mr. Messmer said: "The victory of our adversaries would mean, in the short term or the long, the end of European construction."

A program drawn up by the Socialists and Communists as part of their electoral alliance implies, he declared, the annihilation by the state of all economic activities.

"This would be in any event incompatible with the very principles of the Common Market, which provides for the free movement of men and merchandise, the interpenetration of interests, the uniting of conditions for economic growth and social progress."

Wally Findlay Galleries International

new york - chicago - palm beach - nev. hills
2, Av. Matignon, Paris-8
SIX CONTEMPORARY
ARTISTS
MICHEL - HENRY - FABIEN
KLUGE - ARDISONE
LE PHO - YU CAO DAM
February 15 - March 31

Special Showing
RAOUL DUFY
Exclusive representative of 30 contemporary artists featuring
SIMBARI - SEBIRE - NOVOA - AUGÉ

Impressionists,
post-impressionists
Tel. 225 76-74
Mon. thru Sat. 10 a.m.-7 p.m.

Answers to Teasers
for Travelers

1 A luxury hotel on the Costa Smeralda, Sardinia. Cala di Volpe has a marvelous pool, superb service and a unique character. It's ideal for your holiday.

2 Another luxury hotel on the Costa Smeralda. A cluster of secluded villas, Pitrizza has a standard of service and comfort that's unparalleled anywhere.

3 A first-class hotel at the heart of the Costa Smeralda, Cervo overlooks one of the finest yacht harbors in the Mediterranean. Great for golf too!

These unique hotels are fully air-conditioned, with private pools and international cuisine. They open up the unspoiled Costa Smeralda to you—80 fine beaches, brilliant emerald seas. Clip the coupon to find out more.

Consorzio
Costa Smeralda
P.O. Box 250,
I-07020 Porto Cervo,
Costa Smeralda,
Sardinia, Italy.
Please send me details of your superb hotels.

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____
STATE _____
ZIP _____
TELEPHONE _____
Relax on the Costa Smeralda in the world's most beautiful hotels

Dr. Dickinson W. Richards,
in 1958, when he won the Nobel Prize in Medicine.

ducer of the film "Ulysses" in 1967 and had a hand in distributing or producing other well-known films that included "Room at the Top," "A Taste of Honey," "War and Peace" and "David and Lisa."

Critical Week Opens in Battle Over Atlantic Air Fares

By Richard Witkin

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT).—Confusion, a recurrent condition in the pricing of transatlantic travel, has hit the airlines this year in a dizzying fashion.

There is just over a month to go before the deadline for an international agreement on a new package of air fares. But the airlines, and the governments that own most of those in Europe, are so far apart on what the package should contain that no one is confident what the marketplace will be like after the April 1 deadline.

There could be a compromise agreement, which could simply be a decision to continue existing fares for another season. Or there could be a chaotic price war.

This week should provide important clues as to what is likely to happen. Talks in Washington between the United States and Britain, deemed the most critical of a series of bilateral discussions because British fare proposals are the lowest from a major country, are expected to reach a showdown. The outcome should have an impact on renewed multilateral negotiations by the airlines themselves in sessions scheduled to begin today in London.

U.S. and Britain Trying to Close Gap in Rate Offers

Meanwhile, travelers booking seats on scheduled flights for this spring and summer are being quoted fares at the old levels. The proviso is added that the price finally paid will be adjusted up or down to reflect any international agreements that might be made in the interim.

Fare Nomenclature

The proposed new fares go by such names as APEX and IIT and just plain "excursion," a revision of the existing excursion rates. And there are some new charter flights operating under the names TGC and ABC and offered by both scheduled and supplemental airlines.

In large part, the proposals of the scheduled airlines are a competitive reaction to the new charter systems. The latter, in turn, are attempting to make the lowest-cost flights available to everyone and not only—as the old rules required—to members of organized clubs, unions or other bona fide groupings. In reality, the organized-group, or "affinity," rule has been flouted.

A TGC (travel group charter)

World Church Council
Head Ends Soviet Visit

MOSCOW, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—Philip Potter, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, has completed a weeklong visit to the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Moscow patriarch, Tass news agency reported yesterday.

Dr. Potter, on his first visit to the Soviet Union since becoming head of the WCC, met the chairman of the Soviet Council for Religious Affairs, Vladimir Koryolov, Tass said, and a reception in his honor was given by Moscow Patriarch Pimen.

reservation must be made 90 days in advance with a 25 percent deposit, nonrefundable under most circumstances. Britain's ABC (advance booking charter) works in much the same way. The New York-to-London round-trip fares being advertised for TGC range from about $179, on supplemental airlines, to between $180 and $265 (depending on season) on scheduled lines. But the prices are subject to increases of up to 20 percent if planes are not sold out.

The lowest proposed noncharter rates are the so-called APEX (advance purchase excursion) fares. U.S. airlines have proposed fares ranging from $189 in the winter to $299 in the peak summer months. Again, the reservations must be booked 90 days in advance and a down payment must be made. The British Overseas Airways Corp. has proposed $185 in the winter, $240 in June and August, and $290 in July, the busiest month.

The American-proposed IIT (individual inclusive tour) fares, which require purchase of perhaps $100 in hotel space and other on-the-ground facilities, come to $310 in the summer. The traveler must stay abroad 14 to 21 days. Finally, the proposed "excursion" fare, for stays of 14 to 45 days, would be $410.

Charter Sets Fares
MONTREAL, Feb. 25 (UPI).—Econair, a charter company set up by Air Canada, said Friday it was offering transatlantic fares between Canada and England for a minimum of $179 round-trip.

"The flights will operate from 10 cities in Canada, more than any other charter service, and will serve London, Prestwick (Scotland) and Paris," a statement issued by Econair said. It said the flights, aboard Air Canada DC-8 jets, will operate between May and October.

The statement said the charter fares were being offered under terms of government-regulated advance-booking charter rules, which would require 90-day advance bookings for flights departing after June 30. 30-day advance bookings on flights during May and 60-day advance bookings on flights during June.

Little coupon.

To: AB Volvo, Car Division, Tourist & Diplomat Sales,
S-405 08 Gothenburg, Sweden.

Please send me further information about the Volvo cars and the Tourist and Diplomat Sales program.

REF 26-73

Name:

Address:

Home country (if not the same as above):

Big deal!

If you're a temporary resident in a European country other than your own (or in any European country if you are a non-European) there's a big deal waiting for you.

In short: you buy one of the finest European cars on very special terms offered to diplomats and tourists. And you don't have to worry about any paperwork—our Tourist and Diplomat Sales organization takes care of all that.

As long as you drive your Volvo abroad, it's free of tax and duty. The import charges for taking it back home with you vary from country to country—so you'll have to check with your local authorities. If you live overseas we'll be glad to help you with home shipment on very favourable terms.

Your nearest Volvo dealer will give you full information about this offer and the range of Volvo cars you can choose from. You can also get the same information by mailing the little coupon. Two easy ways to a big deal.

VOLVO

TOURIST & DIPLOMAT SALES

Sweden
AB Volvo, Car Division
Tourist & Diplomat Sales
S-405 08 GOTHENBURG
Tel. 54 00 00, Ext. 1671

AB Bil & Truck
Odinsplatsen 9
S-411 02 GOTHENBURG
Tel. 80 04 00

Ab Bilia
Helsinggatan 43
S-113 84 STOCKHOLM
Tel. 34 06 00

Austria
Wolfgang Denzel
Parkring 12
1010 VIENNA
Tel. 52 84 1

Belgium
Société Belge de Matériel
Automobiles S.A.
157, rue de Hal,
BRUSSELS
Tel. 76 00 90

Finland
O/Y Volvo-Auto AB
Sungatan 21
HELSINKI
Tel. 71 13 11

Denmark
Svend Petersen
Automobiler
SAS Building
Vesterbrogade 6 A
1620 COPENHAGEN V
Tel. 12 04 38

France
Volvo Auto S.A.
125, Champs Elysées
PARIS 8
Tel. 720 35 16 or 720 35 61

Great Britain
Volvo Concessionaires Ltd
Tourist & Diplomat Sales
28 Albemarle Street
LONDON W 1
Tel. 493-0321

Greece
Sarmalis Brothers S.A.
137-151 Leoforos Athinon
ATHENS
Tel. 365.320, 367.001

Holland
Nikam H.V.
Saronsweg 2
BERSD (GLD)
Tel. 03458/8888

Ireland
Huet Motors Ltd
Lad Lane and Pembroke Row
DUBLIN 2
Tel. 63 921

Italy
Molanto SpA
Via Enrico Mattei 66
BOLOGNA
Tel. 33 21 19

Norway
Isberg Bilforretning A/S
Fr. Nansens Plass 6
OSLO
Tel. 33 58 54

Portugal
Auto-Suoco Lda
Aparado 25
SACAVEM
Tel. 33 95 91

Spain
Volvo Concessionarios S.A.
Avenida del
Generalísimo 20
MADRID
Tel. 261 79 73

Switzerland
Automobiles Volvo S.A.
Postfach 12
LYSS by Bern
Tel. 052-84 31 42

West Germany
Volvo Deutschland GmbH
6051 DIETZENBACH-
STEINBERG
Assar Gabrielsonstrasse
Tel. 6074-3031

An AMERICAN FAMILY

By Anne Roiphe

Miss Roiphe, novelist, has written "Digging Out," "Up the Sandbox" and "Long Division."

NEW YORK (NYT)—Elie Wiesel sat in his chair refusing to follow the other dinner-party guests into the TV room where they were watching Lance Loud and his mother, Pat, on WNET's (the Public Broadcasting Corp.) new series, "An American Family."

"One written sentence is worth 800 hours of film," said

Mr. Wiesel, poet, purist, artist.

On the other hand, Margaret Mead has termed the series "an important moment in the history of human thought as the invention of the novel." Probably she exaggerates, but it's no wonder writers are defensive.

Craig Gilbert and his camera crew entered the Loud home in Santa Barbara in May, 1971, and seven months later, at New Year's, they left, having filmed

the family, experiencing the flamboyant, chicklike homosexuality of their oldest son, Lance, the breakup of the marriage of 20 years' standing between Pat and Bill, a fire that came within inches of burning down their home, a minor car accident, the opening of sexual life for their daughter Delilah and her friend

Brade, the slide downhill of Bill's business, the charming but disturbing indolence of their third son, Grant. The camera documents everyday movements of the family as well as crisis points.

Craig Gilbert was led to the Louds (the name rhymes with proud) family by the editor of the woman's page of a Santa Barbara paper. He was looking for attractive people with teen-age children. His thesis was simple:

"If I film any one American family over a long period of time,

I will expose the myths, the value systems, the ways of interacting that are American and apply in some way to all of us. This kind of universality is always the artistic aim. The camera, without the benefit of invention, simply filming what is, cannot create artistic truth, but certain social truths soon become painfully apparent.

Mysteries

The Louds are enough like me and mine to create havoc in my head, and I had to fight a constant strong desire to push away those Louds, dismiss them as unique, empty, shallow, unlike others and yet, on serious reflection, we can all learn from them, perhaps just enough to begin understanding that saddest of mysteries, the American family.

Of course, we're all Peeping

Toms, and so I suppose we should be glad that some of us are also exhibitionists. The Louds permitted the cameras into their home for no financial reward and signed all the required releases willingly. They say they thought it would be fun to be on TV. They know they are attractive, and no fewer than three of the five children hope to be performers.

I suppose they must have thought of themselves as "The Partridge

Family." "My Three Sons" or "The Brady Bunch," but, unsurprisingly enough, reality turns out to bear no resemblance to a typical TV comedy. It looks more like art, like Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," whose plot lines bear some similarity to the Louds' own slice of life. What art has revealed before we now see stripped of style, language, puce tension, and stretched into that nearly nauseous mass, reality, but nevertheless fascinating precisely because it is nearly life, not imitation.

I say nearly because the 300 hours of film, which cost $1.2 million to make, have been edited to some 12 hours of viewing time, and Craig Gilbert's sensibility as well as his physical presence has somewhat altered the raw material, the value of this documentary lies in a combination of the Louds' experience and the organizing intelligence behind cinéma vérité—and one must add to that brew the individual memories and experiences of the viewer.

I think it possible that Pat Loud welcomed the intruding cameramen in part as a distraction from the depression she feels but cannot express, and also perhaps because of an unconscious hope that the filming of the family would in some way alter their lives. If this is so, then she was correct—the advent of camera and crew served as a catalyst to explode a marital situation that had long been dead-locked.

The series opens with its end, Jan. 1, 1972. As the New Year comes in, Pat Loud is alone, kissing her dog, watching her children dancing at a party in the family garage. We then go back to the beginning in May, a family breakfast where we are introduced to the children. The film shows the casual conversation, the desultory morning languor that besets most families at breakfast. Of course, they are self-conscious because of the cameras; this self-consciousness never leaves entirely, but nevertheless the members of the family gradually reveal fragments of themselves and, despite the gauze created by the masks they choose to wear, despite the unnatural situation of cameramen and sound crew trailing around after them, the viewer finally knows these people, or feels he does.

Lance Loud, the evil flower of the Loud family, dominates the drama—the devil always has the best lines. Lance is 20 years old and living in the Hotel Chelsea in New York as the series opens. He describes his family with a kind of campy wit and all the warmth of an iguana singing in the driving rain. The second episode shows Pat Loud coming to New York to visit her son at the Chelsea. It was in this episode I most admired her strong self-control. She is confronted, brutally and without preparation, with the transvestite, perverse world of hustlers, drug addicts, pushers, etc., and watches her son prance through a society that can be barely comprehensible to a 45-year-old woman from Santa Barbara. She reacts with what comes to be recognized as a family characteristic, a desire to calm down, smooth over, pretend everything is all right. She tells Lance (who clowns for the camera, begs money, laments and moans, tells us that "he is the most interesting person he knows," promises with transparent dishonesty to try to get a job) that she thinks "this world is good for him, that he's found himself." She babies him, leaves him money, and tries to understand him, to talk to him, but he is beyond understanding in a wonderland of city cats whose morality and values, whose actions and reactions can only mock those of us on the other side of the mirror.

Of course the rational mind asks what happened to Lance. He was hyperactive at 4 and given tranquilizers by a psychiatrist in Eugene, Ore. After a year, he was considered cured. At 14 he tells us he dyed his hair silver in admiration of Andy Warhol. Later, Pat reminds him that he "went into his room for two years and didn't come out." His mother intensely worries about him, but some sons of such mothers win football awards and marry their high-school sweethearts. Lance saw a psychiatrist once a week for a short time as an adolescent, but Pat says they gave it up because he wasn't getting anything out of it.

Pat says Bill's to blame, for not being closer, more involved with Lance. Lance, she says, is keen, but he couldn't be keener if Bill had only . . . But I suspect getting close to Lance must always have been like swimming alongside an electric eel. Bill puts the blame on Pat: at nine months, the baby was late and, Pat, tired of the long wait, allowed the doctors to induce the labor; Lance was always nervous and high-strung as a result, Bill says.

The youngest son, Grant, 17

years old, has a kind of mysterious, even sexy appeal. His ambition is to be a rock star. He has a band, but he apparently doesn't work very hard at anything, his self-discipline is almost nonexistent; however, his smile, his manner, have a kind of originality

that may make him the popular performer he would like to be.

His shrug, his hair falling over his face, a kind of wild light in his eyes, somehow tell you of an anger underneath, of a sort of bitter binding of the personality that gives it a spice and attractiveness. Grant at 17 can't tell his teacher what is tragic about the Reconstruction era. He can't even easily define tragedy

(like the rest of his family, he feels and things are not even to be given names). He hates

school, he hates work, he seems to like music some and television

a lot.

Grant, however, has a kind of warmth that signals real humor

and sometimes real love. I find myself on his side, hoping for him that he will grow more and become more than just charming.

I imagine that if Grant had lived

on the frontier of America 150

years ago and had been forced to accomplish daily survival tasks,

he would indeed have been a hero—or at least a man; today

he's still a child. However, by our extended social timetable he has many growing years ahead

in which to make his own frontier

and conquer it. A doctor or lawyer, as Pat would have liked,

he won't be, but maybe, just possibly, he'll be a good man.

The William C. Loud family of Santa Barbara, Calif. From left, front row: Michele, 13; Pat, 45, and Bill, 50. Back row: Kevin, 18; Grant, 17; Delilah, 15, and Lance, 20.

Lance (left) and Delilah.

Grant.

gave it up because he wasn't getting anything out of it.

Pat says Bill's to blame, for not being closer, more involved with Lance. Lance, she says, is keen, but he couldn't be keener if Bill had only . . . But I suspect getting close to Lance must always have been like swimming alongside an electric eel. Bill puts the blame on Pat: at nine months, the baby was late and, Pat, tired of the long wait, allowed the doctors to induce the labor; Lance was always nervous and high-strung as a result, Bill says.

The youngest son, Grant, 17

years old, has a kind of mysterious, even sexy appeal. His ambition is to be a rock star. He has

a band, but he apparently doesn't

work very hard at anything, his

self-discipline is almost nonexist-

ent; however, his smile, his manner, have a kind of originality

that may make him the popular

performer he would like to be.

His shrug, his hair falling over

his face, a kind of wild light in

his eyes, somehow tell you of

an anger underneath, of a sort

of bitter binding of the personality that gives it a spice and attractiveness. Grant at 17 can't tell his teacher what is tragic

about the Reconstruction era. He

can't even easily define tragedy

(like the rest of his family, he feels and things are not even to

be given names). He hates

school, he hates work, he seems to like music some and television

a lot.

Grant, however, has a kind of

warmth that signals real humor

and sometimes real love. I find myself on his side, hoping for

him that he will grow more and

become more than just charming.

I imagine that if Grant had lived

on the frontier of America 150

years ago and had been forced to accomplish daily survival tasks,

he would indeed have been a hero—or at least a man; today

he's still a child. However, by our extended social timetable he

has many growing years ahead

in which to make his own frontier

and conquer it. A doctor or lawyer, as Pat would have liked,

he won't be, but maybe, just possibly, he'll be a good man.

air right now one fears he's just going to disappear. A strong woman will marry him, perhaps, and make the necessary connections that give life a form and meaning.

Delilah, 15, tap-dances her afternoons away. She dresses, combs and admires herself in the mirror as any adolescent girl will do. The camera shows her, in a kind of childish flirtation, playing with her boy friend, still innocent. The camera catches her in a beautiful conversation with her father on the telephone. The love she feels for him, the need, even surfaces onto her face as they discuss ordinary, practical matters. When she hangs up you see a sagging of spirit, a sadness that wraps the young, perfect body for a moment. The daddy-love is too distant. Many fathers and daughters will recognize this love, burdened and created by the impossibility of the relationship. Delilah is cool, collected, conformist, a distance between herself and others. She reads nothing. She thinks nothing about the world around her. She gives little, but doesn't take a great deal either.

Closer

After the separation of her parents, Delilah dances with her mother and sister, and the two girls play the piano together. The camera shows the family moving closer together in the crisis. Delilah, both child and woman, reaches out as well as she can to the other side of the family. Watching Delilah play a kind of pat-a-cake with her boy friend, one wants so badly for this young woman to choose a man who will love her truly and forever—one wants her to grow to include more of the outside world. Gilbert describes material on Pat's anger with Delilah as her relationship with Brad becomes more sexual. One hopes as one looks into her pretty face, still soft with already-guarded expectation, that the American dream will work for her. Realistic or not, it's essential to hope.

Michelle at 13 is the last of the Loud children. She's shy about being photographed, partly because of her skin, which has erupted with hormonal vengeance. She seems gentle, loves animals, and the camera always finds her nuzzling a dog or cat. There is a lovely sequence of her combing her horse with a maternal sweetness I hope she never loses. The camera caught that strange connection between young girls and horses, when motherhood and sex are both fused and fore-shadowed.

Pat and Bill have a fight on camera. It is, typically enough, in a crowded restaurant at fiesta time when the drinking has been long and heavy. Later, Pat asks Bill for a separation, again on camera. He returns from a long business trip and she hands him a lawyer's card. He sits down, calls his office on a business matter, says, "Well, then I won't have to unpack, will I?" and without much evident emotion or surprise leaves his wife of 15 years and his children. Pat tells her brother and sister-in-law that she discovered five years ago that Bill plays around; in recent years, she says, he had left evidence for her to find. She first went into shock, then recovered to a tense and bitchy equilibrium, and now wants a new life, hopes for more.

Bill talks about Pat: he loves her, he says, but doesn't want so much togetherness. He tells two rented girls at a poolside in Las Vegas that the togetherness idea has killed American marriages. Because of a dock strike and other difficulties, Bill's business seems to be in some trouble, and this puts him under an additional strain and gives him another problem to avoid confronting. At 50, he is a large, good-looking man with a seeming warmth and an open smile. He can tolerate no conflict, admit no failures. He resents the series because "it makes the divorce look sadder than it was." Only to a man like Bill, who pretends always that this is the best of all possible worlds, could a divorce seem like a minor toothache.

He avoids any direct confrontation with what's bothering him in others, and certainly there is not an iota of introspection.

Over the summer, 18-year-old Kevin goes on a sales trip with Bill's assistant. He visits Thailand, Bali and Australia, and he writes back formal letters that spell the word pretty, "prity." He returns and seems to have seen nothing, learned nothing. He appears on camera with a sweet smile, a handsome face. He seems to be interested in nothing very much. He makes few waves and stays carefully on everyone's good side. He works later in his father's business.

At 18 Kevin was assigned a 300-word paper on Hamlet. He spent a week at home working all day, trying to write it. Finally he gave up and got a friend to do it for him. Kevin did run for student council president at Santa Barbara High, but was defeated. Maybe he'll be a good salesman, but he seems so much like thin

Maybe a little guilt left over from his Catholic boyhood in Eugene, but nothing approximating self-questioning. If there is anything wrong, it's the other person's fault.

Why the infidelities? The camera doesn't tell us, but we can guess. Bill reached his early 40s and his first son was not going to be a man; he was of himself could have been badly shaken by that unacknowledged discovery. The disappointment may have driven him to prove himself with others. A man, says there's not much more to conquer—the creative, proactive part of his days are over. He looks in the mirror and sees the curve bending down. He turns away to new conquests, he keeps moving

Why the infidelities? The camera doesn't tell us, but we can guess. Bill reached his early 40s and his first son was not going to be a man; he was of himself could have been badly shaken by that unacknowledged discovery. The disappointment may have driven him to prove himself with others. A man, says there's not much more to conquer—the creative, proactive part of his days are over. He looks in the mirror and sees the curve bending down. He turns away to new conquests, he keeps moving

Why the infidelities? The camera doesn't tell us, but we can guess. Bill reached his early 40s and his first son was not going to be a man; he was of himself could have been badly shaken by that unacknowledged discovery. The disappointment may have driven him to prove himself with others. A man, says there's not much more to conquer—the creative, proactive part of his days are over. He looks in the mirror and sees the curve bending down. He turns away to new conquests, he keeps moving a lot, so as not to hear the sounds of regret and sadness that might otherwise drown him in despair. All men can sympathize with Bill about this. He says on camera things about the children that sound harsh and unloving—they should get out on their own, make their own money, leave him alone, etc. But that's only part of the truth; the man also loves his children, and often we see him reaching out to them like a blind man trying to pat bunny rabbits hopping about a large meadow. He is saddened that they are less than he would have wished, and he can't admit that to himself, so he plays tough; the tenderness, I suspect, is always just beneath the surface—he hasn't found a way to consistently express it.

Pat.

Reviewers

Bill Loud has said that reviewers of the series have judged the family from an Eastern point of view—and he may be right that the sunwashed shores of Santa Barbara are so far away from puritan New England that it's not right to transpose standards. But Bill Loud seems exactly like so many men who have been a part of my Atlantic Coast life—men who, like Willy Loman, never really kick the system, can never be certain they are on top, who struggle every day just to maintain what they have, who love their children and wives, and yet leave bitter and battered people in their wake. Most of all they are men who cannot rest, feel fulfilled, men who need alcohol and women to protect them from their thoughts. It seems less a problem of geography and more a failure of our society to make possible an easy, comfortable manhood in which the building of a family does not so often leave behind the rubble of a burnt-out house. Certainly one of the most scared victims is the man himself, "Attention" in Mrs. Loman's words of almost 25 years ago, "must be paid."

Pat is a handsome woman who dresses impeccably, fashionably. She lies by the pool, she cleans the house with the help of a twice-a-week Mexican maid—and not much help from the kids. She was graduated from Stanford, an education which left her essentially separated from her Catholic religion and seems to have given her little in return. While she expressed no open horror at Lance's homosexual friends or ways, she scolded him angrily for traveling to Washington with a friend who wanted to protest the attempted suppression of the Pentagon Papers. She wanted him not to get involved in politics. It seems to have bothered her considerably more that topknoted transvestition. She says she saw Craig Gilbert, "about how people look—their money, their manners."

In 1966, a One-Man Peace Mission Failed

By Waverley Root

PARIS (IHT).—On Jan. 27, 1973, the agreement to bring peace to a Vietnam that had been at war for 32 years was finally signed in Paris. It was more than six years after what may well have been the first direct contact between an American and a Vietnamese with a view to ending the war. This contact occurred on Dec. 15, 1966, in the improbable setting of the NATO building in Paris during that organization's annual end-of-the-year meeting.

It is my opinion that agreement to end the war could have been reached then, on terms as good as, or better than, those that have been accepted now, and probably with greater ease—thus sparing the death, destruction and suffering that occurred between 1966 and 1973.

I feel entitled to express an opinion on this subject for I was the American involved in 1966. It was early in December, 1966, that an official of the U. S. Embassy, who was also a friend, asked me to act as an intermediary between the United States and North Vietnam.

The reason he addressed himself to me was that I knew Mai Van Bo, the head of the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris. He was virtually Hanoi's ambassador to France, although the political situation made it inconvenient for him to be given that title officially. Nevertheless, his rank in the diplomatic hierarchy of his country was that of minister plenipotentiary.

I had known Mr. Bo since June 20, 1964, when a French ambassador who had been a friend of mine for 20 years (he was only a vice-consul when I met him) invited us to his apartment in Paris—probably for the first time. Our conversation lasted for two and a half hours and was highly informative, although I wrote nothing about it at the time.

Our talk was private, even confidential, all the more useful to me as a journalist because under such conditions Mr. Bo could, and did, speak freely, without being obliged to impose upon himself the restraint that any public figure has to exercise when he knows that what he says will be printed for everyone to read.

My U.S. Embassy friend explained what was wanted of me. There was a current in Washington in favor of making a really determined effort to open peace negotiations with North Vietnam, but—despite statements that had been made in Hanoi, which were discounted because public utterances were always suspected of being distorted—the U.S. government officials remained in the dark about what Hanoi would really settle for. These people in Washington preferred that an American should make direct contact with the North Vietnamese to try to find out.

I would be given a number of specific questions that the U.S.

officials wanted Hanoi to answer. My job was to get the answers.

I was warned to make no reference to this mission before any of my numerous friends at the embassy, for they would not be in on the secret. The usual channels were being short-circuited. "Your report will go direct to the White House," I was told. "Even the ambassador does not know about this."

"You may," my embassy friend added, "be making history."

But I had no desire to make history. I preferred to report. I also believed that the exercise of journalism is incompatible with performing services for the government.

But how could any American in a position to contribute to the extrication of his country from the Vietnam quagmire refuse to help? I said I would do what I could and asked if I could have credentials to assure the North Vietnamese that I was entitled to speak for somebody besides myself.

"That is out of the question," I was told. "You must pretend to be acting as a journalist."

Early Problems

Since our lunch in 1964 we had met several times and I had always enjoyed access to Mr. Bo. This time it proved unexpectedly difficult. The United States, after a 37-day pause, had resumed bombing North Vietnam early in the year and Mr. Bo was refusing to talk to Americans. I managed to make contact nevertheless, and he appointed as my informant a North Vietnamese journalist who, like me, was covering the NATO meeting.

This is how it happened that my talks with a Communist spokesman started against the inappropriate background of the press briefing hall of the anti-Communist NATO.

The talks developed with undiplomatic speed. The first contact was made in the NATO building on Dec. 15 and the second in the same place on the following day.

It was at this second meeting that I first put my questions. We met again at a "Chinese" restaurant that was actually North Vietnamese, a cover for our more or less clandestine rendezvous, and twice more at my apartment, from which my wife had been invited to absent herself. These five meetings, plus the time required to transmit my questions to Hanoi and to receive the answers, took just nine days. On the evening of Dec. 23 I was given Hanoi's responses— orally. I handed in my report on Dec. 24. It seemed to me that Hanoi's answers constituted a considerable Christmas present, for they gave grounds for believing that a way could be opened toward peace. Nobody had asked for my opinion, but I gave it anyway. "Hanoi is willing to negotiate, but suspicious," I wrote in my report. "The sine qua non is the cessation of the bombings."

I added that Hanoi's answers to the questions I had put were all the more significant because, from the first, nobody had been taken in by the pretense that I was simply a journalist looking for information. The North Vietnamese realized perfectly well that I was an unofficial messenger for official principals, and their responses were therefore made in the spirit of one country talking to another.

The capital point in Hanoi's answers, it seemed to me, lay in the response to an American question on the four points publicly proposed by Premier Pham Van Dong as a basis for peace: "Was the United States being called upon to accept these points as a prior condition to the opening of peace talks?" Not at all, Hanoi answered; they were simply a suggested basis for a political solution—a starting point for talks, a basis for an agenda.

For example, on the specific question of the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam, one of the four points, Hanoi was not insisting that the troops had to be withdrawn before negotiations could start. That would, indeed, have been thoroughly unreasonable, unrealistic and unrealistic: no American government could have consented to pull out its forces as a preliminary to negotiations in which the other side was seeking to secure their departure. Such an action would have been a simple surrender.

What Hanoi did want was an American statement of intent to withdraw its forces after, and only after, the conclusion of a peace agreement. This would have committed the United States to nothing if it had proved impossible to agree. If an agreement were reached, it was to be presumed that the United States would be only too happy to bring its soldiers home. The United States did indeed agree to withdraw its forces in 1973; it could hardly have been more difficult to do so in 1966, when there were six years less of bitterness and suspicion to be overcome.

"Why had Hanoi made no response to American overtures toward peace, expressed in official speeches and public statements?" one of my questions asked. Hanoi replied that it was a political impossibility to negotiate unless the bombing stopped.

Why the North Vietnamese seemed to want was a public statement by the United States that it was renouncing bombing. This would have made it difficult in the face of world public opinion, for America to return to these tactics later. But I had the impression that a cessation of the bombing, even unaccompanied by a pledge not to resume it, would have been enough to bring Hanoi to the peace table. One question put to the North Vietnamese was presented in curious form; the answer was curious too. "If American forces were withdrawn, how long would it be before North and South Vietnam would reunite?" It asked—not whether they would be reunited.

Eventual reunification was apparently taken for granted—after all, it had been accepted at the 1954 Geneva Conference, and in 1973 it would be accepted again. Hanoi answered that it desired the reunification of Vietnam, but that it could hardly be achieved immediately—certainly not before the U.S. presidential elections of 1968.

This sounded very much like an offer to make a deal. In effect, the North Vietnamese seemed to be saying that in exchange for peace, they would not embarrass the President who made that peace—and who was then presumed to be a candidate for re-election—by precipitating before the elections an action that might cause voters to doubt the wisdom of the terms that the President had accepted. This answer seemed to betray a desire to reach agreement.

"Does the Democratic Republic of Vietnam aim at the domination of all Indochina, including Thailand?" Hanoi was also asked. The answer was: "We share a common language and a common way of life; but there are many local differences, and although ultimate reunification of the former Indochina might seem desirable—economically, for instance—it does not seem likely for a great many years." No answer was made to the question about Thailand.

A Longer List

There were a number of other questions and answers, but those I have summarized were the most important. I told my embassy friend when I handed him my report that I thought Hanoi was in as conciliatory a mood as could have been expected and that the moment seemed propitious for negotiating an honorable peace. I waited with a certain optimism for some sign from Washington that the opportunity was being seized. None came.

With hindsight, it is possible to understand why I was asked to undertake my mission at that particular time, and why it had no sequel. In the fall of 1966, international opposition to the war was strong. Bowing to it, President Lyndon Johnson delivered a speech in San Antonio, Texas, on Sept. 29 appealing once more to Hanoi to talk peace. Hanoi refused any discussion unless the bombing were stopped unconditionally, and the United States was unwilling to end the bombing without a quid pro quo.

The North Vietnamese told me they had no quid pro quo to offer.

American spokesmen had intimated that the United States was prepared to call off the bombing if Hanoi would end the infiltration of troops and supplies from North to South. In Hanoi's view, this was unacceptable. They had virtually no air force and, at that time, inadequate anti-aircraft defense. Hence if they agreed to cut off the supplies and reinforcements going South, leaving their soldiers to wither on the vine, they would be giving up the only war they were able to wage.

President Johnson's appeal therefore fell on deaf ears. Two more approaches to Hanoi for the opening of peace talks were initiated, one secret, the other open. My mission, if it had been followed through, would have been part of the secret one. The open one was undertaken by Arthur Goldberg, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

On Dec. 19, four days after my first contact with the North Vietnamese, a letter from Mr. Goldberg to United Nations Secretary-General U. Thant was made public. In it the secretary was asked to use his good offices to bring about peace talks. Secretary of State Dean Rusk followed this up on Dec. 21 by announcing that "maximum latitude" had been given Mr. Thant for this effort. On Dec. 30, after consultations, Mr. Thant answered that the "first and essential condition for negotiations was that the bombing should be stopped—exactly what I had reported six days earlier."

When my North Vietnamese interlocutor gave me Hanoi's answers on Dec. 23, I asked him what Hanoi thought of the Goldberg move.

He said that the Paris delegation had not yet received any directives about it, which might be considered an indication that it was being taken seriously. The silence contrasted sharply with the speed of Hanoi's reaction year earlier, when the United States had dispatched ambassadors to various parts of the world on "peace missions." At that time Hanoi immediately notified its representatives abroad that this was a propaganda maneuver to which no importance should be attached.

But the moment passed and the pendulum of history, which for a moment had swung to the side of peace, swung back again to the side of war.

My modest effort was consigned to oblivion. For six years I have considered it as having been futile. But was it entirely sterile? Did some faint echo linger on to contribute however minutely to the final result?

WHY MORE PEOPLE ARE NOW CROSSING THE ATLANTIC WITH TWA'S AMBASSADOR SERVICE THAN WITH ANY OTHER AIRLINE.

TWA is the only airline to have a terminal to itself at New York's Kennedy Airport. BETTER.

TWA's 707 twin seat. When nobody's next to you, the middle becomes a side table. BETTER.

TWA's Ground Ambassadors help you with last minute problems. BETTER.

On Ambassador Service, there's a choice of three main meals in economy. BETTER.

With Ambassador Service, there's a choice of two films and eight tracks of audio.* BETTER.

We've cut away the bottom of the seat in front to give you more shin room. BETTER.

TWA doesn't just fly to New York. We fly you to 35 other US cities as well. BETTER.

If you hate smoking, we have strictly no-smoking sections on all planes. BETTER.

Containerized luggage. It saves you time, and protects your bags. BETTER.

On 747's a Director of Customer Services can make instant bookings in the air. BETTER.

Special rates for Hilton hotels in 30 US cities if you book before you leave. BETTER.

It's the best service to America. Call TWA, or your travel agent. BETTER.

THE MOST COMFORTABLE FLEET OF PLANES IN THE WORLD.

*IATA requires us to make a nominal charge for in-flight entertainment.

An American Family

(Continued from preceding page.)

sociate editor with the Forum for Contemporary History in Santa Barbara, and has already been promoted several times.

The filming of the family certainly did not cause the breakup, but it did hasten what was probably inevitable. Craig Gilbert says that some time after the separation, Pat developed an emotional involvement with him, one that seemed somehow to have been promised in their daily work relationship. But Craig was not prepared to merge the observer with the subject, and his subsequent remoteness complicated relations between the two of them. Despite this seemingly necessary professional coolness, Craig appears to be a soft and kind man, intellectual, artistic, an amateur anthropologist, a warrior, an improver. He must have seemed to Pat, after years of neglect by the uncommunicative Bill, like the prince who cuts his way through the thorny rose bush to wake Sleeping Beauty from her deep sleep. When Craig decided to keep his distance, she would talk to him only through other people. His withdrawal symbolizes—and reminds us of—the way all of us observers, writers, commentators, social thinkers, fail really to change anything for anyone. We always try to understand and cannot get anything altered. Like with doctors whose magic is not working, we increase our noise, stamp our feet and affect nothing.

On Sept. 5, Pat Loud sent the crew a thank-you letter after seeing the series in which she said, "I think you've handled the film with as much kindness as is possible and still remained honest. I am, in short, simply astounded, enormously pleased and very proud." After the reviews came out, in an about-face, Pat and Bill both started to vocally object to the series. Pat told an interviewer for the Santa Barbara paper, "I think we're a very well-adjusted family. The divorce is a matter of philosophy not psychology."

"We spent 30 years building a family, and they selected only the negative, bizarre and sensational stuff," Bill Loud said. "But I'm really grateful. It was a very gratifying experience." As for Pat, her assessment of Craig Gilbert was, "He's a kind, perceptive, sweet man who wouldn't hurt us for the world."

The Louds' sensitivity is understandable. They have been exposed to public scrutiny in a way they never intended or expected, and a life involved with good appearances has been publicly questioned. But I wish they understood and could be comforted by the fact that they are not separate or different from the rest of us. Our fascination with them is an expression of their ability to symbolize the common dilemmas.

When sorting through the experience of viewing the Louds, my first realization was that all the avenues of culture as I have understood them were missing from the Loud family life. If there is such a thing as negative culture or culture minus, the Louds have it. The blaring sound of rock is the high point of creativity in the family. There are no crafts. There is no religion. There is no avenging sensibility, no real moral right or wrong. I think the Louds have escaped the small-town mores of an earlier America. They have been educated and led into a large vacuum, and like the rest of us are cast out without the structures of work and religion that used to shape the days. We have so much freedom we are now culturally Neanderthal.

Bill and Pat Loud sit in their living room afraid, it seems of nothing—no demons give them bad dreams, no wild animals haunt their steps. A brush fire comes within inches of the house. Michele is young enough to be frightened and screams into the night. Pat and Bill return home after the danger is over. They comment about the fire casually. If the house burns, it's insured; nothing really has the power to hurt them. It seems logical that when the culture has thinned down to the alcohol the Louds and their children are always imbibing and then has evaporated, a nation of Louds will silently float away.

When they're in the house they sit by the pool which, clear blue as it was, I began to see as a field swamp breeding a kind of fly that gives us all a fatal case of cultural malaria.

It is important to remember that we see the Louds on an edited film. They claim happy moments were cut out. But, knowing their tendency to insist on their state of felicity, including a happy divorce and a keen, gay son, deep into the drug scene, I would suspect we saw a reasonably true slice of life.

This article was written for The New York Times Magazine.

Internationalizing Peace

The purpose of the assembly of government notables, plus the secretary-general of the United Nations, which opens in Paris today, is, according to South Vietnam's foreign minister, "to de-Americanize the peace."

Continuing to state his position in negatives, Tran Van Lam said that the best guarantee for the success of the cease-fire would be for the great powers not to intervene and not to encourage either side to violate the armistice agreements.

If that were as far as the meeting at the Hotel Majestic could go, it would nationalize the peace—or what the world still only hopes will be peace. That is, it would leave the whole thing up to the Vietnamese to settle, and since neither side is really satisfied with the territorial or political status produced by the cease-fire, the chances are that both would just fight it out.

But Mr. Lam would have the conference go beyond that—and so would the Canadians, who are present as one of the four members of the supervisory commission. The Canadians, and Saigon, appear to agree that at this point the Security Council of the UN should provide political backing for supervision of the truce—should, in effect, assume overall responsibility for carrying the cease-fire terms into effect.

Logically, this would be an excellent solution, since, after all, keeping the peace is a major reason for the UN's existence. Unfortunately, the North Vietnamese have been consistent in their opposition to any UN role in the struggle and neither China nor the Soviet Union have any enthusiasm for UN action beyond passing resolutions and conferring.

Between an assertion of UN authority and the return of the problem to the original contestants, is there any action which the group assembling at the Majestic can take? It is an unusual body, at least in the degree of cooperation which the major powers seem ready to render. The United States is on better terms with the Soviet Union and China than at any time in the last 25 years or so. The two Communist states, while at odds on much, have a good deal in common with respect to Vietnam. If the emphasis is placed upon common interests, rather than mutual divisions, they should be able to reach agreement on some measures for the effective maintenance of the peace in Vietnam, even if they cannot reach accord on allowing the most natural means of accomplishing this end—the UN—to take a hand.

In any case, this is the most serious positive test of the recent rapprochement between Washington and Moscow, and Washington and Peking. Trade and cultural exchanges are one thing; getting together to try to insure a genuine truce in an area where their ideological and nationalist concerns have been at odds for more than a decade is another matter. But if the results in Paris meet this test, then the prospects for Mr. Nixon's "generation of peace" will be vastly strengthened.

Détente With China

A good deal of the remaining ice in Chinese-American relations evidently melted during Henry A. Kissinger's successful visit to Peking. The central agreement was a decision on what amounts to an exchange of ambassadors and other diplomatic personnel. The communiqué speaks of setting up mutual "liaison offices." That sounds like establishment of quasi-diplomatic relations, which would probably be fully realized except for the still delicate problem of Taiwan.

But it is precisely because the United States still officially recognizes Taiwan and has troops there that the willingness of Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai to go as far as they now have toward normalization of Chinese-American relations is so impressive. All of the rest of the fruits Mr. Kissinger brought home from Peking—agreements to expand trade, to increase the exchange of scholarly, cultural and sports groups, to release American fliers now in Chinese jails and to begin negotiations in Paris on reciprocal Chinese and American economic claims against each other—testify to the speed and the strength of the Peking-Washington political thaw that is now in the ascendant.

From Washington's point of view, the cordiality of the Kissinger reception in Peking and the scope of the new agreements must bring hope that China will help stabilize the still far from pacified regions of confrontation in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. And the possibility is also raised that Peking may eventually aid in the resolution of other world problems ranging from nuclear disarmament to the Middle East.

But the growing Chinese-American warmth is hardly considered good news everywhere around the globe. In Moscow undoubtedly there are many who wonder what secret agreements went unrevealed in last week's terse Washington-Peking communiqué. The Russians know perfectly well that it is fear of the Soviet Union that has induced Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai to change their attitudes toward the United States so dramatically. It would be surprising if the Russians did not seize an early opportunity to make a high-level sounding to learn whether there is a basis for their fear of Chinese-American understanding directed against Moscow.

In Taiwan, the growing Peking-Washington cordiality must be producing increasing concern among at least two groups: the more militant anti-Communist mainlanders in Chiang Kai-shek's regime and the more ardent Taiwanese nationalists who want independence for their own island. However, there must be elements in Taiwan now who are pondering how and when best to make their peace with Peking and to accept what they must regard as the "inevitable" reintegration of Taiwan with mainland China. The drama and the heartbreak involved in the choices faced by the main groups in Taiwan should not be lost sight of in the midst of the celebration here over improved Peking-Washington relations.

Finally, in Tokyo, it is already evident that there are Japanese suspicions that the détente in Chinese-American relations is being guided by Washington with an eye to improving this country's competitive position vis-à-vis Japan in China, both politically and economically. It was useful that Mr. Kissinger stopped in Tokyo on his way back to Washington and briefed leaders there on his talks in Hanoi and Peking. But it was unlikely that those briefings satisfied all Japanese factions or ended Japanese suspicions. And it is unfortunate that this great advance in Chinese-American relations has, by an accident of history, taken place in the wake of the severe blows psychologically and otherwise suffered by Japan during the recent intricate international negotiations which ended with the devaluation of the dollar and the involuntary floating of the yen.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Enrico Caruso

He was born a hundred years ago Sunday, and his voice still thrills millions. If ever there was a singer for all the ages, it was Enrico Caruso, and his very name is synonymous with singing. Enrico Caruso of the Metropolitan Opera. Caruso and Farrar. Caruso and Destinn. Caruso and Scotti. It was always the name of Enrico Caruso that came first. Farrar, Destinn, Scotti and the others—great singers all, but they do not live today. Caruso does.

He made hundreds of records, and through those old Victor Red Seals comes that molten voice, that incredible instrument with the baritone underpinning, that sound of sheer exultation, that feeling of triumphant virility. A voice cannot be described in words. All one can say is that Caruso was unique. It was not a matter of vocal power alone, though he had that in plenty. It was not a matter of color alone, though his voice could take on more shades than a peacock. It was not a matter of musicianship alone, for although he was a sensitive musician he was not the most subtle singer in history.

Whatever it was, it ended up a function of personality over natural endowments. A natural, simple, lovable personality comes through the awesome voice. At basis this is what makes all of us, so many years later, identify with the man as well as with the singer. And that is why Caruso's recordings are still selling in the millions. Caruso loved to sing, and his voice eternally communicated that joy, on a cosmic level.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

In the International Edition

Seventy-Five Years Ago

February 26, 1898

NEW YORK.—News from Washington is graver than at any time since the Maine disaster occurred and high officials of the administration no longer conceal the fact that they regard the situation as extremely critical. Although the Board of Inquiry is still conducting its investigation, secretly all reports from Havana assert that the Maine was destroyed by an outside explosion, most probably by a submarine mine.

Fifty Years Ago

February 26, 1923

BOSTON.—According to a statement of the so-called "Sacco and Vanzetti Committee," Nicola Sacco, who, with Bartolomeo Vanzetti, was convicted of the murder of a payroll guard at a shoe factory in Braintree, Mass., in 1920, and was given the death penalty by a jury in 1921, and on whose behalf radicals in both America and Europe made frequent demonstrations during the fall of 1921, has been on a hunger strike since Feb. 15.

'Was That All Me?'

Spiro Agnew on the Road

By James Reston

MINNEAPOLIS.—Vice-President Agnew has been out here on the road quoting Arthur Schlesinger, of all people, and saying some very sensible things to the Minnesota Press Association, and this not only indicates a change in the tone of his public speeches, but suggests that he is trying to build a much wider political base.

His theme to the editors was that they should not be so jumpy when criticized by some official in Washington. One or two speeches critical of newsmen, he said, didn't mean that the administration was engaged in a conspiracy against the reporters or planning to dismantle the First Amendment.

He conceded that Schlesinger was not his favorite historian, but he quoted him as saying that the Kennedy administration "used to wonder about the hypersensitivity of reporters."

"When editorial and administrative opinions differ," the Vice-President observed, "why cannot the differences be accepted as sincere judgments on both sides?... The fact is," he added, "that the Nixon administration is no more desirous of, nor more capable of, curtailing freedom of the press in America than any of its predecessors."

Well, more things could be said about this than the patience of readers would tolerate, but it is interesting that Agnew is now speaking in such moderate tones and equally interesting that the national press virtually ignores him when he does lower his voice.

Returns Studied

Nevertheless, he has obviously studied the election returns and noted that candidates who opened on small but ardent blocs of voters at one extreme of the American electorate don't get very far in American politics. George McGovern lost the middle before he lost the election, and it is clearly going to be Spiro Agnew's task, not only to hold onto his base on the right but win the support of the middle if he is to win his party's nomination in 1976.

This is not to say that the Vice-President is changing his tone solely for selfish political reasons. He did not come into national politics as a man of the right. His record as governor of Maryland was one of moderation and, in part, of liberal innovation, and he started the 1968 presidential election campaign not as a supporter of Richard Nixon but as a backer of Nelson Rockefeller.

In Nixon's first term, when the President felt that the criticism of the newsmen and commentators on Vietnam was beginning to turn the country against the administration and impair the President's credibility, Agnew was given the assignment of leading counterattacks on the newspapers and the networks. And he did it very well.

Always Available

In fairness to the Vice-President, however, even when he was leading the political charge against the wicked scribbler, he never personalized the battle, was always available to the men he attacked and, unlike some of his colleagues in this administration, never impressed those of us who argued with him that he was a zealot who was out to weaken the fundamental liberties of press and television.

In short, he was given an assignment by the President, and he carried it out, but he has restored the balance he wanted, and he now has a new problem. It is to move into the center, as Nixon moved away from the right, and to put himself in a position to lead "the new Republican majority" the President is trying to put together.

It will not be an easy task. He is in a better position now, four years before the next presidential election, than Nixon was four years before he managed to get the Republican presidential nomination in 1968, but, unlike Nixon in those lonely days, he does not come into Minnesota for a speech and spend his time with the local Republican politicians, building strength and seeking support for the next presidential campaign. He is undoubtedly aware of the possibilities and also of his likely opponents, but his ambition seems no more compulsive than his ideology. He didn't set out to capture the Republican conservatives; they captured him, and in a way he is probably more comfortable with his new moderate scenes than he was with his alliterative attacks and provocations on the newsmen a year or so ago.

Accordingly, he is now at the point in his career where Nixon was before the 1968 campaign, when men seeking office talk more sense than they do after they get in.

One recalls with some nostalgia the comment of Richard Nixon before he got into the White House: "The President has a duty to decide," he said, "but the people have a right to know why. The President has a responsibility to tell them—to lay out all the facts and to explain not only why he chose as he did but also what it means for the future. Only through an open, candid dialogue with the people can the President maintain his trust and his leadership."

"It's time we once again had an open administration—open to ideas from the people and open in its communication with the people—an administration of open doors, open eyes and open minds."

"We should bring dissenters into policy discussions, not freeze them out; we should invite constructive criticism, not only because the critics have a right to be heard, but also because they often have something worth hearing... The President cannot isolate himself from the great intellectual ferment of his time. On the contrary, he must consciously and deliberately place himself at their center..."

more sense than they do after they get in.

One recalls with some nostalgia the comment of Richard Nixon before he got into the White House: "The President has a duty to decide," he said, "but the people have a right to know why. The President has a responsibility to tell them—to lay out all the facts and to explain not only why he chose as he did but also what it means for the future. Only through an open, candid dialogue with the people can the President maintain his trust and his leadership."

"It's time we once again had an open administration—open to ideas from the people and open in its communication with the people—an administration of open doors, open eyes and open minds."

"We should bring dissenters into policy discussions, not freeze them out; we should invite constructive criticism, not only because the critics have a right to be heard, but also because they often have something worth hearing... The President cannot isolate himself from the great intellectual ferment of his time. On the contrary, he must consciously and deliberately place himself at their center..."

Make More Room at the Top

By C. L. Sulzberger

CUERNAVACA, Mexico.—The eccentric spoils system which seems to it that generous American contributors to the campaign chests of winning presidential candidates are rewarded by being named Ambassadors abroad is now running into trouble. Soon there won't be enough foreign countries to handle the mob.

One may therefore suggest that rich political donors who find there aren't enough embassies going around should be assigned other positions of prominence. Ambitious to serve their country and willing to pay for the privilege, such donors might be awarded commands of aircraft carriers, nuclear submarines, or armored divisions.

Admittedly prospects are that with congressional budget-pruning and national war-weariness there will soon be a smaller number of these units of defense. Nevertheless, the figure remains high enough for the Pentagon to share the human wealth thrust upon the State Department.

Over 100 Envoys

Washington now exchanges ambassadors with over 100 capitals. Once the theory was that most chiefs of mission should be trained career officers, speaking foreign languages, whose mature life had been spent preparing to supervise U.S. interests and represent U.S. policy decisions with maximum expertise.

The goal of a fully professional elite was never wholly realized as it has customarily been in other countries like France and Britain. There were always posts where upkeep was so expensive that it couldn't be paid for by State Department funds awarded by a niggardly Congress.

It has been customary to reserve such positions for rich amateurs of proper political coloration. There have been times when truly outstanding diplomats were created by this system—and not just in the early days when we had no career service but could still field men like Benjamin Franklin and John Jay.

No professional corps exerts the quality or devotion of David Bruce, Averell Harriman, Ellsworth Bunker or a distinguished line of American envoys to India, for example. Yet the political spoils system, as applied to diplomacy, has also seen the United States send overseas chiefs of mission who, by their own testimony, didn't know what or where NATO was or had no idea of the name of the chief of government to which they had been assigned.

The custom has been to flesh out the staff of such inexperienced gentlemen by assigning to them as right hands, when possible, career diplomats who might limit the repercussions of their boo-boos even if they couldn't always avoid them.

No recent President save perhaps Dwight Eisenhower really liked the U.S. Foreign Service and none has refused to include embassies among political spoils. Nor, despite stubborn efforts of such differing secretaries of state as Dean Acheson, John Foster Dulles and Dean Rusk to save good posts for worthy career men, have they always been able to win the good fight.

But nowadays the spoils system runs riot. The secretary of state has abandoned his normal authority in this as well as other fields. Henry A. Kissinger obviously has far more gigantic fish to fry. So the American professional ambassador risks becoming as extinct as the whooping crane.

Today all but two major U.S. diplomatic posts overseas, outside Latin America, are filled or are about to be filled with what the service calls "politicos." Bonn and shortly Saigon will be exceptions, meantime London, Paris, Rome, Madrid, Athens, Tokyo, The Hague, Brussels and so on are assigned to the loving ambassadorial care of those who bet right, not trained right.

The Nixon Retreat On Anti-Poverty

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON.—Whatever its shrewdness as a political tactic, the Nixon administration's retreat from welfare reform and its willingness to abandon or dismember the program of legal services for the poor is undercutting the moral and logical base of its own design for reshaping domestic policy.

That is a sweeping statement. I realize, but it is the only conclusion one can draw from a consideration of the contradictions between the premises of the President's program and the actions he is sanctioning today. For one who has welcomed and supported many of Mr. Nixon's domestic reforms—particularly, his efforts at decentralization—it is painful to see him sacrificing integrity in order to satisfy a short-term political goal.

A convenient starting point from which to see what has happened is a paragraph of Daniel P. Moynihan's new book, "The Politics of a Guaranteed Income," in which Mr. Nixon's first-term domestic counselor discusses the three "strategies" available to the government to assist the poor in America.

Liberals' Strategy

One was the "services strategy," the direct provision or financing of a wide variety of programs aimed at meeting the needs or improving the opportunities of the poor. As Moynihan notes, this was "quintessentially the approach of political liberalism in the middle third of the 20th century."

The second was the "legal strategy," the use of the courts and the legal process to end discrimination and obtain equal access to all public programs and facilities. This approach, carried out by both private organizations and the government, was embodied, among other places, in the legal services program of the anti-poverty agency, the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The third was the "income strategy," the transfer of money to the poor through the simple mechanism of taxing-in-and-paying-out, with the goal of enabling the poor to obtain, through the marketplace, the goods and services they most valued for themselves.

Given this choice of options, Mr. Nixon's domestic strategy unfolded in clear and logical terms. He decided to reduce the dependence on the service strategy, for several reasons: It had been the approach of his Democratic predecessors and he wanted something different. It had led to the creation of a huge Washington bureaucracy, which he wanted to reduce. It had caused increasing racial and social discord, which he wanted to minimize. And it had been of doubtful value to its intended beneficiaries, whose plight he wanted to improve.

Techniques Meshed

The legal strategy, on the other hand, seemed worth preserving. It had achieved significant success in the field of civil rights and, as a lawyer, Mr. Nixon could perceive its usefulness in moving questions of economic injustice off the streets and into the courts. And the income strategy also made sense to him, not only as a device for dealing directly with the most serious problem of the poor, but as a technique that meshed perfectly with the preference for decentralization and decision-making embodied in his other major domestic initiative, revenue-sharing.

Thus, in his first years as President, we saw Mr. Nixon seeing the growth rate of domestic service programs, while publicizing and legal strategies. The words are worth recalling.

In his 1969 welfare reform message, he said: "I propose a new approach that will make welfare more attractive to work than welfare and will establish nationwide minimum payments to dependent families with children. I propose that the Federal Government pay a basic benefit to those American families who cannot care for themselves and never state they live."

In his poverty-program reorganization message of that same year, Mr. Nixon proposed that "the Office of Legal Services" be strengthened and elevated to that... it will take on central responsibility for programs which help provide advocates for the poor in their dealings with social institutions. The strengthening of many institutions at all levels of society in responding to the needs of individual citizens is one of the central problems of our time. Disadvantaged persons in particular must be helped so that they fully understand the legal means of making their needs known and having those needs met."

In the light of that history, what can one say about Mr. Nixon's current domestic policy? He has carried forward his campaign against the "services strategy" full blast and in his new budget is proposing not just to provide services for the poor.

But what has happened to the other two strategies that were to substitute for it? The "income strategy" has been abandoned by Mr. Nixon. There is no welfare reform or minimum-income proposal in his budget and none is likely to be forthcoming.

Outlook Grim

As for legal services, the outlook is equally grim. Having frustrated Congress's efforts to create an independent, nonpolitical legal services corporation, by insisting on personal control of its board of directors, Mr. Nixon is now presiding over the destruction of the existing OEO legal services program, which has been significantly successful in obtaining equal access to government benefits for its poor clients and which enjoys the strong support of the organized bar.

At the same time, he is continuing the other phases of his decentralization program by proposing to go beyond general revenue-sharing into a broad range of subsidies to local governments, for them to use as they wish. In effect, he is telling the poor, "Don't come to Washington with your problems. Get what you need from your local government."

To do that to the poor, without giving them the financial or legal resources to wage the fight for their rights in those thousands of local communities, is not a strategy for achieving social justice and simultaneously reducing the power and influence of the central government.

It is a callous sacrifice of the minority who are poor to the political tactic of attempting to create a Republican majority from the many who are complacent and comfortable.

It is a disillusioning spectacle for those of us who thought Mr. Nixon was attempting something more worthy.

Letters

Pakistani POWs

The cynicism of W. Rahman's letter on Pakistani POWs (Feb. 22) and India's reasons for holding them makes me feel sick. Is there no decency left? I don't give a damn about legal quibblings. These are matters for lawyers. All I know is that there are 93,000 men, women and children in Indian war camps and that they should return to their homes and families.

GERARD VERNON.

The simple fact, notwithstanding Mr. Rahman's sophistry, is that Bangladesh is holding the Pakistani POWs as hostages, as a club to force Pakistan to recognize a country it has every right to refuse to recognize.

R. MORIN.

Geneva.

Eurobonds

'Supplementary Realignment' Fails to Still Monetary Fears

By Carl Gewirtz

PARIS, Feb. 26 (UPI)—Once again money is on the move. Short-term Euro-dollar rates are being bid up sharply as money managers rush to borrow cash to finance their purchase of deutsche marks, Swiss francs and gold. There was an understandable feeling of déjà vu as last week's dollar crisis unfolded; the same scenario was used in 1971 and again this year, enabling the operators to repay their Euro-dollar loans with devalued dollars—and make a handsome profit.

The only startling element was that it came barely two weeks after what monetary officials call the "supplementary realignment" cutting the dollar's value 10 percent. The economic textbooks say that a devalued currency should perform strongly immediately after losing weight.

"Obviously, that, 'weight' is sinking, and some bankers and economists the message is a fear that the West is headed for a period of unbridled inflation culminating in a trade war. Others hear a more general fear that the international monetary system, which has made possible the boom in post-war trade and economic growth, is on the verge of a complete breakdown."

Most are agreed that the rush into gold is not an attempt to turn a quick profit, but to be in a traditionally safe spot during a storm.

"They cite the billions of dollars washing around Europe which the United States refuses to redeem. These dollars have become a threat to the monetary system as they are the vehicle used to mount speculative raids on the billions of these dollars pouring into Frankfurt from January and into Paris in February, estimated at $10 billion."

The dollar's devaluation—a devaluation that many bankers remain convinced was economically unjustified and sure the United States was against the other major European currencies.

They read President Nixon's intention to ask Congress for authority to use, as he sees fit, quotas and an import surtax "to keep things fair" as a sign that the United States is arming itself for a trade war. The promise to remove controls on U. S. capital outflows leaves many bankers stupefied.

And fears are expressed that the absence of a traditional tight monetary policy to accompany the U. S. devaluation indicates that ample funds will be available to enable America to go on "living beyond its means"—to suck in imports, to travel abroad, to invest overseas and to continue the balance-of-payments deficits. A fear, in short, that America will inflate itself (and with it the rest of the world) into chaos.

This all having been said, it must be noted that bankers and economists are by profession optimists. Which is to say that while the fears are real, they are convinced that the politicians will not allow the situation to degenerate.

"The destruction of confidence in the overall monetary system is deadly," says a European banker. "But it had to come, if only to clean the table for the next round of international discussions."

To an American investment banker, "the United States is unsophisticated in the same. A combination of naïveté, sloppiness and domestic politics is preventing it from adopting a rational, over-all approach" to the underlying economic problems. But

Economic Indicators

WEEKLY COMPARISONS

	Latest Week	Prior Week	1972
	Feb. 17	Feb. 10
Commodity Index....	144.6	142.4	112.5
*Currency in circ....	$64,714,000	$59,736,000	$59,736,000
*Total Loans	$87,416,000	$86,348,000	$84,548,000
Steel prod (tons)....	2,832,000	2,886,000	2,418,000
Auto production.....	216,543	223,904	176,756
Daily oil prod (bbls).	9,328,000	9,284,000	9,460,000
Freight car loadings..
*Elec Pwr. kw-hr....	36,947,000	35,739,000	32,705,000
Business failures	134	170	220

Statistics for commercial-agricultural loans, carloadings, steel, oil, electric power and business failures are for the preceding week and latest available.

MONTHLY COMPARISONS

	Jan.	Pror Month	1872
Employed	82,555	82,786,000	80,579,000
Unemployed	4,366,000	4,487,000	5,055,000
Industrial production	119.8	R119.2	108.2
*Personal Income	$365,400,000	R$362,300,000	$383,900,000
*Money supply	$255,400,000	R$255,500,000	$236,200,000
	December	Pror Month	1871
Consumer's Price Index	127.3	126.9	123.3
Constructs Contracts	163	177	160
*Mfrs. Inventories	$107,181,000	$106,371,000	$101,665,000
*Exports	$4,466,200	$4,468,700	$3,850,000
*Imports	$5,029,400	$5,027,900	$4,126,400

*000 omitted.

Commodity index, based on 1967=100 the consumers price index, based on 1967=100, and employment figures are compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Industrial production is Federal Reserve Board's adjusted index of 1967=100. Imports and exports are reported by the Department of Commerce. Money supply is total currency outside banks and demand deposits adjusted as reported by Federal Reserve Board. Business failures compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Construction contracts are compiled by the F. W. Dodge Division, McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company.

he, too, is convinced that a solution will be found.

Certainly the most evident sign of optimism was the weekend announcement that the state-owned Renault will float a 13-year bond with an expected interest rate of 7 1/4 percent. The loan will be denominated in Lebanese pounds—50 million—the first attempt to launch a long-term issue in this currency on the international market will be placed among Moroccan and North African countries and is being managed by the KPMG de Bruxelles, Banque Audouin Investment Bank, Lyonais, Libyan Arab Bank, Bank and Union des Banques Arabes et Françaises. The loan will be listed in Beirut, Luxembourg.

(Continued on Page 11, C)

It least and nique
Ku-

convincing. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, conceded as much this week when he termed the progress so far in fighting inflation as "insufficient."

Although major progress was made during the last two years in reducing the rate of inflation in this country, the onset of Phase 3 in the economic-stabilization program has created great doubts in many places that the progress will be sustained.

U.S. Stock Prices Continue Their Fall, With Dow Losing 20 Points in Week

If the Nixon administration can demonstrate that it will pursue a tight fiscal and monetary policy and that Phase 3 really has a strong bite in its teeth, as Washington has been proclaiming, there would be more hope that proper anti-inflation policies were being pursued.

in a strong U.S. economy, which will continue to suck in a huge volume of higher-priced imports. In addition, there is the unrelenting surge of food prices in this country, a gradual increase of many other prices and the growing irritation of labor as it approaches this year's heavy period of wage-contract negotiations.

Amex and Over-Counter

By Alexander R. Hammer

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (NYT).—Prices on the American Stock Exchange and on the Over-the-Counter market finished lower last week in slower trading.

The NASDAQ Over-the-Counter industrial index closed on Friday at 120.44, off 2.97 from the previous Friday. The exchange's price index dropped 0.33 to end the week at 25.07.

Turnover on the exchange slumped to 13,864,000 shares from 17,518,000 shares the week before. A total of 50 blocks changed hands last week against 62 blocks the week before. There were only four trading sessions last week since the markets were closed on the last day of Washington's birthday.

Most of the Canadian oil issues were weaker following the news that the Canadian government was taking steps to control the market. Canadian Oilfield Services Inc. lost 1/4 to 37 1/4.

Another large loser was Houston Oil & Minerals which dropped 6 1/2 to 27 3/4. The company said there weren't any undisclosed recent developments that would account for the loss.

Among the other weaker issues, Bowmar Instruments fell 5 1/8 to 25 and Syntex dropped 5 to 67.

In the Over-the-Counter market, a few issues managed to buck the downward trend. NPC Corp. gained 1/2 to 7 1/4 on the news that state insurance officials in Arizona had approved its plan to merge Coast South Western Life Co.

Higher earnings helped Mid-Central Properties, a real estate concern, move up 1/4 to 16. The company reported that its profit in the first half ended Dec. 31 climbed to 40 cents a share from 11 cents in the year-before period.

First Mortgage of North Carolina dropped 3 to 27 1/2 on the news that the company was planning new financing. Data General fell 7 to 120 1/2 despite announcing a three-for-one stock split. Arrived a land developer, fell 1 1/2 to 10 3/4 after reporting higher profits for 1972.

Mary Kay Cosmetics dropped 7 to 63, Docutel 3 1/2 to 40 1/2 and Weight Watchers International 3 to 27.

The prices of industrial materials and commodities have continued to rise strongly, too, following the immediate surge in mid-January when price controls were loosened. Purchasing agents report they have been paying higher prices for a host of items, including some aluminum, steel and copper products, electrical components, lumber, paper, chemicals and fasteners.

With all the turmoil in the world's monetary markets, the pessimistic mood in the financial markets here and the worry over national economic policy, it is hardly surprising that the ongoing boom in the American economy remains largely unnoticed.

Nevertheless, economic activity is proceeding at a very fast pace—only slightly reduced from the unusually quick tempo of the fourth quarter of last year.

There has been some slight reduction in consumer confidence as well, according to the University of Michigan's quarterly survey, but the change has not been great, and the level remains considerably higher than it was a year ago.

The strength of consumer optimism is reflected, of course, in the public's spending proclivities which have remained high. The general retail scene could hardly be more buoyant.

Only the disappointing performances of the various price indexes—wholesale and consumer—

(Continued on Page 11, Col. 5)

Over-Counter Market

[illegible][illegible]

(Continued on Page 11, Col. 1)

BEARER SHARES OF CAPITAL GROWTH COMPANY S.A.
We buy at U.S. $1.50
We sell at U.S. $1.25
Universal Venture Capital S.A. c/o Box 4524, Beirut, Lebanon
Prices valid until March 5, 1973.

INFLATION AND INCOME 15%

ASL (INTERNATIONAL LUX.) S.A. Luxembourg
Manufacturing chemists. Antibiotics, antihistamines, cosmetics.

"Dear Investor,"
The remarkable progress which the Companies ASL have made in recent years has continued and indeed, continued at an accelerated rate. We have achieved record profits in every division of the group last year. ASL now manufactures products in many countries and is active in our financial and technical assistance. We have a large program of expansion and are keeping abreast of a very low level through continuous hard work and extensive travel.

We need more capital amounting to some millions of dollars. We invite you to invest some of your savings with us. Your investment can be a minimum of five hundred dollars and a maximum of several hundred thousand. It does not have to be in dollars as local currencies are accepted.

We specialize in mergers with pharmaceutical and agricultural feed-stuff companies all over the world. Through this system, we help the local national company, the native people and we all make money. Our production is ethical and safe for human and veterinary use. Our top specialty is antibiotic feed grade for the production of meat in 50 days. We need more capital and we invite you to contact us if you are interested in purchasing bonds. Our bonds have the following advantages:

1. A guaranteed 15% income for the first year and 16% for the second year. After two years you can convert them to shares.
2. The income is paid monthly in any desired currency and can be sent anywhere in the world.
3. The ASL-BOND may be cashed in at any time and you will receive back the full amount of your original investment.
4. The income you receive from your ASL-BOND will be tax free. Local governments are granting the taxes for our company investments as they are being earned.
5. The cost of living index rose 8.8 minimum during the last twelve months all over the world. (The Financial Times Survey, December, 1972.) Taking this survey into consideration our ASL-BONDS are not only offering a high income but also a hedge against inflation.
6. The world's factories in our group are increasing prices according to the local cost of living index. It is legally permitted.
7. So it is not as high as it looks! You receive a high income and we make money too. The truth is the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Factories in many countries! We are negotiating mergers of more factories and the purchase of mercantile ships for the transport of chemicals. Please be kind enough to write us! Thanking you in advance, we remain, Sincerely,

Dr. Paul ROHRER,
President of ASL (INTERNATIONAL) S.A.
For prompt delivery and answers write:
ASL A.G./Inc. - Manufacturing Chemists
73 BAARERSTRASSE, 6900 ZUG/Switzerland.

TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK
GENEVA

takes pleasure in announcing the opening of its REPRESENTATIVE OFFICE
in 6000 FRANKFURT/Main, Niedenau 61-63.
Phone: (0611) 72.60.48/49.
Telex: 416896.
Cables: SUDAFINBANK.
and the appointment of
Mr. A. GILON as Resident Representative.

TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK, Geneva (with branch offices in Chiasso, London and Nassau), as well as:

REPUBLIC NATIONAL BANK OF NEW YORK, New York.
TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK OVERSEAS INC., Panama
TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK (FRANCE), Paris
TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK (LUXEMBOURG), Luxembourg are subsidiaries of TRADE DEVELOPMENT BANK HOLDING S.A., Luxembourg.

Representative offices in: Beirut, Caracas, Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo, Buenos Aires.

16.2.1973

This announcement appears as a matter of record only.

BULGARIAN FOREIGN TRADE BANK

SOFIA

$15 000 000

7-YEAR EURODOLLAR LOAN

arranged by

BANQUE DE SUEZ ET DE L'UNION DES MINES BANQUE COMMERCIALE POUR L'EUROPE DU NORD (EUROBANK)

and provided by

BANQUE AMERIBAS BANQUE COMMERCIALE POUR L'EUROPE DU NORD (EUROBANK)
BANQUE EUROPEENNE DE TOKYO BANQUE DE L'INDOCHINE
BANQUE NATIONALE DE PARIS BANQUE ROTHSCHILD
BANQUE DE SUEZ ET DE L'UNION DES MINES BANQUE DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE
BANQUE DE L'UNION PARISIENNE CREDIT COMMERCIAL DE FRANCE
CREDIT INDUSTRIEL ET COMMERCIAL CREDIT LYONNAIS
CREDIT DU NORD FRAB BANK INTERNATIONAL SOCIETE GENERALE UNION DE BANQUES ARABES ET FRANÇAISES "UBAF"

February, 1973.

Bond Sales on the New York Stock Exchange

Domestic Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Foreign Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Government Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Municipal Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs
Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs	Bonds	Sales in $1,000	High Low Last	Net chgs
AlmPw 95-2001	20	104 105 105 1/2	-17 1/2	Bethl 95-2001	27	73 74 74 1/2	-3 1/2	ConsEds 58-7	15	75 76 76 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-275	127	103 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2002	20	103 103 103 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2002	6	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-8	14	72 73 73 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-276	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2003	102	124 118 118 1/2	-2 1/2	Bethl 95-2003	2	80 80 80 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-9	20	71 72 72 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-277	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2004	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2004	13	77 77 77 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-10	4	66 66 66 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-278	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2005	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2005	20	101 101 101 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-11	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-279	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2006	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2006	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-12	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-280	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2007	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2007	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-13	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-281	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2008	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2008	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-14	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-282	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2009	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2009	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-15	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-283	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2010	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2010	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-16	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-284	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2011	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2011	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-17	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-285	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2012	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2012	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-18	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-286	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2013	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2013	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-19	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-287	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2014	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2014	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-20	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-288	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2015	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2015	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-21	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-289	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2016	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2016	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-22	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-290	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2017	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2017	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-23	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-291	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2018	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2018	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-24	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-292	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2019	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2019	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-25	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-293	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2020	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2020	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-26	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-294	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2021	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2021	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-27	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-295	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2022	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2022	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-28	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-296	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2023	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2023	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-29	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-297	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2024	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2024	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-30	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-298	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2025	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2025	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-31	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-299	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2026	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2026	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-32	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-300	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2027	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2027	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-33	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-301	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2028	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2028	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-34	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-302	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2029	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2029	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-35	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-303	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2030	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2030	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-36	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-304	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2031	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2031	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-37	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-305	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2032	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2032	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-38	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-306	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2033	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2033	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-39	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-307	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2034	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2034	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-40	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-308	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2035	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2035	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-41	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-309	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2036	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2036	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-42	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-310	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2037	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2037	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-43	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-311	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2038	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2038	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-44	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-312	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2039	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2039	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-45	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-313	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2040	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2040	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-46	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-314	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2041	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2041	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-47	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-315	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2042	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2042	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-48	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-316	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2043	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2043	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-49	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-317	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2044	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2044	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-50	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-318	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2045	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2045	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-51	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-319	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2046	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2046	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-52	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-320	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2047	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2047	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-53	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-321	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2048	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2048	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-54	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-322	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2049	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2049	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-55	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-323	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2050	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2050	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-56	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-324	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2051	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2051	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-57	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-325	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2052	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2052	10	71 71 71 1/2	-1 1/2	ConsEds 58-58	2	65 65 65 1/2	-1 1/2	GAC PCF 12-326	107	104 104 104 1/2	-1 1/2
AlmPw 95-2053	10	74 74 74 1/2	-1 1/2	Bethl 95-2053	10	71 71 71 1/

PEANUTS

B.C.

L.I. LABREER

BEETLE BAILEY

MISS PEACH

BUZZ SAWYER

WIZARD OF ID

REX MORGAN MD

POCO

RIP KIRBY

BLONDIE

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

Since the club king is a dubious value, most experts would choose to pass with the North hand or perhaps bid a weak-two in spades. In any event a desirable part-score in hearts is not easy to reach.

However, North boldly opened one spade. His raise of the heart response was certainly better than a spade rebid, and South was not inclined to hang about of game.

Playing in four hearts, South must assume that a normal trump break will leave him just one loser in that suit. He should also assume a diamond loser, since the chance of finding East with exactly K x x is quite poor. The crucial question is how many club tricks will be lost. One club can be discarded on the spade ace, and if given the opportunity South may be able to ruff two clubs in the dummy.

The opening lead was a club, and South maneuvered skillfully. After taking the club ace, East shifted to the heart queen, but it was too late. South won with the king in dummy and took the next four tricks by ruffing in the black suits. Next he cashed the spade ace, discarding a club, and reached this position:

At this point, South ruffed another spade with the heart eight, and West was helpless. If he refused to overruff, South would cash the heart ace and lead a low diamond. If he overruffed and led a diamond, South could win in his hand, cash the heart ace, and lead a low diamond. And overruffing and returning a trump would be equally unavailing.

Both sides were vulnerable. The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	1♥	2♥	2♣
2♣	2♦	3♥	3♣
3♥	3♦	4♥	4♣
4♥	4♦	5♥	5♣
5♥	5♦	6♥	6♣
6♥	6♦	7♥	7♣

West led the club two.

Solution to Friday's Puzzle

REPTILIANTHES	STU
ACTORBOGLOCK	REN
THELLAMOFFTHELAND
HAIRKINOWOWEDTO
LEADINDIRIS	SEIRAC
REFOURCISTHERIAK
RIAS	CLAIRS
PICKERING	ROUGHER
RAIR	LAOS
GNIV
ERAT	WITTH
GRADIS
LAIRAT	TRIVE
UTIAH
ALCERSS	ARTIS
BIRIO
RELA	ACCELERATED
SSS	CEASELESSLY

DENNIS THE MENACE

BOOKS

BUCKY

A Guided Tour of Buckminster Fuller

By Hugh Kenner. Morrow. 338 pp. Illustrated. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

HUGH KENNER meets R. Buckminster Fuller, just try to imagine it. Here comes Fuller, the closest thing we have to Lewis Carroll's White Knight... his saddle bags brimming with vacuum toothbrushes and test-tubes... his motto: "I have seen the future, and it is there (I'm sure)" emblazoned on his escutcheon. And here comes Kenner, professor of English at the University of California, Santa Barbara, gazing mildly at the century through the eyes of a poet. They meet at a bend in space. "It's an inversion of my own," cries Bucky, fixing his trifurcals on a geodesic bubble he's blown. "Marvelous! It's what underlies 'Finnegans Wake,'" exclaims Kenner. "Dynamism" whoops Bucky, seeing Kenner's metaphors. "Let's dance," cheers Kenner, looking down on Bucky's dome. They dance.

You follow? Neither do I, exactly. Not, at least, until the penultimate chapter of "Bucky: A Guided Tour of Buckminster Fuller," when Kenner splits himself into Supporter and Skeptic, debates Fuller's virtues and faults, and seems to give winning points to the Skeptic, who says, "Ah, but how those environments of (Bucky's) would coerce." Gadgets, like toys, preoccupy. They impose their routine. And their owners are seeking for them. "His comes after last." He relies "on the psychological prestige of computers, and [ignores] the plain fact that it is low." There is a sense in which everything he has touched has aborted, leaving him to expound an ever more detailed vision of the Universe. "He has lived long enough to see that nothing is going to work out as he expected." And one sighs with relief to see one's half-baked prejudices against Fuller confirmed.

But elsewhere—when Kenner is not being elusively gnomic—"learning something is not so that you thought was so is not to lose but to learn a great deal more," or indulging his flagrant wit, Fuller's early prose style, Kenner writes: "A sentence would gain momentum like a cast-off wheel, bounding down ideological hillsides, entangling random clotheslines, frightening the chickens"; or teasing us with half-concealed keys to his own books (Fuller's "Talk solved for me, that week (in 1967) a book called 'The Pound Era' I had been trying to think out for years and was suddenly able to start writing." But how? One pleads to know)—when Kenner's not up to these familiar games, he's up to others equally familiar by now.

These are tricks in which hard nuggets of fact suddenly break up into opaque disquisitions, bewildering analogies, and self-evident claims whose self-evidence remains infuriatingly elusive. Now we are hearing of Fuller's pedigree, of Bucky's suicidal moment on the shore of Lake Michigan in 1927, or of his renunciation of alcohol because people were ascribing the things

In his sixth decade the large pattern finally worked itself clear. His mission, he has come to believe, has always been simple: To supply folk no more than normally curious with a coherence for the experience they are likely to have... encourage them to Dig Wholes.

All of this tells us something more about Hugh Kenner, too—about the original, if quirky, mind that has been unfolding slowly in 10 books now—studies of Pound, Wyndham Lewis, James Joyce, T.S. Eliot, Samuel Beckett—works whose real subject Kenner claims, "is the 20th-century life of the mind." So "Bucky" goes up on the shelf with the rest of those books. To await further reading, further puzzling over, and perhaps further additions that will help us to Dig Kenner's Whole as well.

Mr. Lehmann-Haupt is a book reviewer for The New York Times.

CROSSWORD

By Will Weng

ACROSS
1	— in one's throat	50	Peruvian's parting word	21	Place to rusticate
6	Latin music form	53	Arden	23	Vibration
10	Word of disgust	55	Defects	25	Bawl
14	Alleg's cat	57	Library users	27	Côte d'
15	City in Oklahoma	62	Egyptian cross	28	Da Vinci subject
16	Wolfe	63	Numerical prefix	29	Progress slowly
17	Moss Shearer	65	Moroccan prof	30	Bravo or Grande
18	Oblige	66	Sort of action	32	Competition for M.I.T.
19	Distress	67	Coalition	34	Mouth in
20	Office hookup	68	Unrinsed	35	Archman title
22	Verse section	69	Mer	36	Spring
24	Eel	70	Prefix for an Asian land	37	Klin
26	Resurrected	71	County in N. J.	38	Feature of Orion
27	Moslem noble			39	Elias
31	Looseened			42	Indian tribe
33	U. S. resident in Panama area			45	Salem's partner
35	Bathed			47	Old Hambletonian site
36	Patient man			48	Architectural style
39	Vulgar			50	Conscious
41	Noisy initial consonant			51	Reed
43	Cheer			52	Annoying person
44	Mature			54	Kind of chestnut
46	Broadening agent			56	Walls
47	Stabilizing device			58	Neighbor of Burma
49	Coin			59	Arab garments
				60	Plunder
				61	Charon's river
				64	Second-century date

JUMBLE—That scrambled word game

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

BLEER

URPPE

PLOARE

RYLURF

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Print the SURPRISE ANSWER here: A

(Answers tomorrow)

Saturday's Jumbles: CAPON VALET MANIAC FERVID

Answer: People in complete agreement may speak with one—VOICE

مكتبة الشرح

Training Starts Thursday

Baseball Labor Dispute Is Settled

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (UPI)—Negotiations for baseball's club owners and players ended today that they have reached complete agreement on a three-year contract, assuring the scheduled start of spring training on Thursday.

The contract, subject to ratification by the club owners and players, was announced after a 90-minute meeting by the negotiators at the offices of John Gaherin, chief negotiator for the owners.

They were released pending review and ratification by the owners and players.

"The ratification by the players will begin as soon as possible in spring training," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association and the chief negotiator for the players. "We will meet with two clubs at a time to speed it up."

Miller said that there will be a meeting of the players association's executive board Wednesday.

need in Miami to discuss the agreement.

"I'm very happy it's over with," said Minnesota Twins pitcher Jim Perry, who attended today's meeting.

National League President Chub Feeney said that he and president Joe Cronin of the American League planned to inform the major league clubs that spring-training camps may now open on schedule.

Miller also announced that the remaining regional player meetings, including tomorrow's meeting in Chicago, have been canceled since the players will be reporting to spring training on schedule.

The two chief stumbling blocks, almost from the start of negotiations, were the players' insistence on having outside arbitration in salary disputes, and the owners' refusal to budge on the free-agent issue. The settlement was reached when the owners yielded to the players on arbitration and the players agreed to table the discussion on free agents so it can be studied for the next two years.

The players gained a number of concessions in the new package, including increased minimum salaries, increased financial shares for the World Series winners and losers, and additional expense money during spring training.

Met Over Four Months

Owners and player representatives had been meeting more than four months since those talks with the arbitration and free-agent debates consuming most of the time.

When the owners saw that the players would not relent in their demands, they announced that spring training camps would not open until an agreement was reached. During the past 10 days, an increased number of meetings took place between Miller and Gaherin.

Feeney and Cronin also were on hand for those sessions. On Wednesday, John Gaherin of Pittsburgh, John McFall of Montreal and Robert Reynolds of California, three of the four owners on the player-relations committee, met by themselves. Cronin and Feeney then met with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday.

The protracted negotiations proved somewhat costly to major league clubs. The Pittsburgh Pirates canceled their losses at $22,500 for having to miss March 2-4 exhibition games. Other teams felt the same pinch with cancellation of some games at their training camps.

One owner, Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox, was distraught by the prolonged blockage that he mentioned the possibility of selling his ball club.

Miller, an old hand at labor bargaining in the steel industry before accepting his present post, had charted a course of seven regional meetings with players, beginning with a Feb. 23 session in Los Angeles, to acquaint them with the situation.

At no time during the negotiations was the word "strike" mentioned by the players. No strike vote was ever taken.

NBA Standings

EASTERN CONFERENCE
Atlantic Division
Boston	11 12 310
New York	10 13 298
Philadelphia	10 13 292
Pittsburgh	7 16 244

Central Division
Baltimore	11 12 310
Atlanta	10 13 298
Houston	10 13 292
Cleveland	7 16 244

WESTERN CONFERENCE
Midwest Division
Milwaukee	11 12 310
Chicago	10 13 298
Portland	10 13 292
San Francisco	7 16 244

Pacific Division
Los Angeles	11 12 310
Phoenix	10 13 298
Seattle	10 13 292
Portland	7 16 244

Golden State	40	25	.615	0
Phoenix	31	36	.479	17 1/2
Seattle	21	46	.313	28
Portland	16	49	.245	32

Friday's Games

Chicago 84, New York 83 (Love 24, Walker 18; Lucas 22, Bradley 18). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Detroit 107, Baltimore 105 (Lanier 30, Bing 27; Chenier 27, Unseld 20). Bob Lanier wins game on hook shot with Phoenix 125, Buffalo 106 (Scott 29, Wal 28; McAdoo 24, Kauffman 16). Charlie Scott scores 19 of Sun's 40 points in fourth quarter.

Seattle 124, Atlanta 120 (Haywood 28, Brown 24; Hudson 39, Maravich 25). Golden State 111, Los Angeles 106 (Mullins 32, Barnett 24; McMillian 28, Goodrich 23). Nate Thurmond grabs 23 rebounds. Lakers' Jerry West still on; with injury.

Houston 138, Philadelphia 118 (Marin 30, Tomjanovich 25; Halliburton 31, May 18).

Cleveland 121, Portland 102 (Carr 26, Wilkens 23; Petrie 22, Wicks 19).

Saturday's Games
 Baltimore 128, Portland 110 (Clark 31, Riordan 23; Wicks 25, Neal, Petris 18).
 New York 125, Buffalo 97 (Frazier
 25, DeBusschere 18; Kaufman 20, Mc-Adoo 14).

ASAP 141.
Chicago 122, Phoenix 100 (Love 30, Van Lier 20; Scott 26, Wesley 18).
Golden State 102, Milwaukee 93 (Barry 26, Mullins 19; Jabbar 27, Allen 17).

The Scoreboard

GOLF—At Manila, Kim Sheung Hock of South Korea made a 10-foot putt on the 18th hole to win the $15,000 Philippine Open by a stroke on the wind-swept Wack Wack Golf and Country Club. Kim's 2-over-par 74, combined with earlier rounds of 72-72-71, gave him a 289 total, one over par on the 7,078-yard course. It was also Kim's first Asian circuit victory.

Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Thursday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Friday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Saturday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Thursday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Friday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Saturday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Thursday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Friday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Saturday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Thursday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Friday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Saturday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Thursday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Friday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Saturday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Sunday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Monday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Tuesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester 28, Ring 27; Chandler 27, Unzueta 20). Bob Love wins game on basket with eight seconds to play.

Wednesday's Games
Portland 107, Baltimore 105 (Lester

